The first essence of an offence under s. 396 of the Penal Code is that the dacoity is the joint act of the persons concerned, and the second essence of the offence is that the murder is committed in the course of the commission of the dacoity in question. The essence of the offence of robbery involved in the offences under ss. 395 and 396 is that the offender for the end of committing theft or carrying away or attempting to carry away properties obtained by theft, voluntarily causes or attempts to cause to any person death, or hurt, or wrongful restraint, or fear of instant death or of instant hurt or of instant wrongful restraint. When several persons are found to have attacked and assaulted some other person or persons, not for the purpose of carrying out the object of looting property, but quite independently of it, the main element which constitutes the offence under s. 395, read with s. 396, Indian Penal Code, is wanting, and there can be no conviction of the accused for that offence. KISA-DURFEROR v. BIMOJA SONDDEKE DOSSIA . . . . . 15 W. R. 288

3. ——— Suit by partner of lessee for illegal ejectment where he was not a party to the contract of lease. Where a person becomes surety for the due performance by the lessee of the obligations contained in a lease for a term of years, and afterwards became a partner with the lessee, and the lessor ejected the lessee before the expiration of the lease it—Held, that a suit would be by the surety for damages arising from the illegal ejectment, although the surety was not a party to the original contract with the lessor. BERRODA KANT ROY v. 4. ——— Tenant's right to compensation for eviction—Acquisition of land. Government took for public purposes a quantity of land, which included four cottages leased by M to plaintiff as the site of an iron foundry. Proceedings with a view to compensation were duly had, pursuant to Act VI of 1857, and the arbitrators awarded a sum for the whole land and premises, of which sum they gave plaintiff a small part, and the rest to M. Plaintiff, who did not appear before the arbitrators, brought a suit to reimburse himself for loss sustained by him—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the whole sum awarded by the arbitrators.

6. ——— Breach of contract in completing purchase—Earnest-money, right to recover. D contracted to sell to P a piece of land for Rs. 4,500, of which he received Rs. 700 as earnest-money. A contract was drawn up, by which D agreed to execute and register a bill of sale, and deposit a part (Rs. 1,800) of the price, and P was to execute a bond for Rs. 2,000, to bear interest conditioned for the payment of that sum by a fixed date, the transaction to be completed within a specified period. D was ready and willing to perform his part of the contract by the time named, but finding that P would not complete the purchase, but demanded back the earnest-money, he sold the property to a third party for Rs. 800. P then sued to recover the earnest-money and damages. Held, that P was bound to show that the circumstances were such as to give him an equitable right to have back the earnest-money, and that, had it not been deposited, D could have justly sued for damages to the extent of the loss incurred by the second sale, and therefore P was not entitled to recover the Rs. 700. RAJCOOMAR ROY CHOWDHRY v. DEBENDRONATH ROY . . . . . 15 W. R. 41

7. ——— Contract for sale of immovable property—Breach of such contract—Damages—Costs of suit—Title to be made by vendor. On the 8th October 1881, the defendant, who was executrix of one M, contracted to sell to the plaintiff a house in Bombay for Rs. 331; the contract to be completed within two months. The plaintiff paid Rs. 50 as earnest-money at the date of the contract, and the remainder of the purchase-money—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the conveyance.

the plaintiff was not for the title-deeds, in order that the conveyance might be prepared; and on the 6th December, the defendant through her solicitors replied that she was ready and willing to execute the conveyance, but could not find the title-deeds. The plaintiff's solicitor then requested to be furnished with an abstract of title, or a statement of the defendant's title to the house, and then they would consider what could be done. No reply to this letter being received, they wrote again on the 10th December 1881, stating that the time for completing the contract had expired; and giving formal notice that, if the defendant did not send the abstract or statement of title within two days, proceedings would be taken to compel specific performance and to recover damages. In reply to this letter, the defendant's solicitors wrote on the 11th December 1881, that they were unable to find the title-deeds, and that they were unable to state that the property was mortgaged to M (of whose will the defendant was executrix) and one K; that K had agreed to convey the property in question to the defendant; and that the deed of conveyance was being prepared. They struck to state that the property was mortgaged to M (of whose will the defendant was executrix) and one K; that K had agreed to convey the property in question to the defendant; and that the deed of conveyance was being prepared. They

Further correspondence ensued, and a suit was filed on the 20th February 1885 praying for specific performance and Rs500 damages, or that the defendant should pay to the plaintiff the sum of Rs2,500 damages, and refund the Rs500 earnest-money. It subsequently transpired that the title-deeds were with A, the co-mortgagee, and they were set forth in the defendant's affidavit of documents filed in July 1885. The defendant, after the suit was filed, sold the property to one J, and A, the co-mortgagee, joined in the conveyance to him. Held, that the case was governed by Flureau v. Thornhill, 2 W. R. 1070, and Bain v. Fothergill, 7 Eng & Ir. Ap. 268, and that the plaintiff could not recover damages for the loss of his bargain. The agreement provided that if the defendant failed to discharge the debt he should be liable to plaintiff for any damage which the latter might sustain. No time was fixed for the performance by the defendant of this obligation, and he, in fact, failed to perform it for a period of nearly three years, whereupon this suit was brought. Held, that the agreement was not a mere contract to indemnify; that defendant was bound to discharge the debt within a reasonable time, and that his failure to do so during three years was a breach of the contract, notwithstanding the fact that the third party had not enforced his claim against the plaintiff. The measure of damages payable in consequence of such breach would be the amount of the debt which defendant had undertaken to discharge.

50. — Assessment of damages—Contract—Breach of contract to deliver goods—Market price at due date—Suit in High Court cognizable by Small Cause Court—Decree in such suit, for less than Rs. 1,000—Costs—Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), s. 20, as amended by s. 11 of Act I of 1895. Where for purposes of assessing damages, it is necessary to ascertain the market rate on a certain day, and evidence of alleged actual dealings on that day is given, the Court must be satisfied that such dealings were contracts made in relation to the true prices of the day, and not made merely with a view to influence the prices and, therefore, affording no clue to the real price at that date. Per JENKINS, C.J.—Obviously, value created for special purposes is irrelevant, and it is for this reason that the prices made by Bulls and Bears are of no use. If the market value is uncertain, then we must have recourse to such surrounding circumstances as affect the probabilities, and, among them, to real prices proved about the time of due date. The plaintiffs sued the defendants for damages for non-delivery of cotton, the question between them being the market rate on the 25th May, 1900, the date on which delivery should have been made. The 24th May was a holiday, and it was proved beyond dispute that on the 23rd the rate was Rs. 225 per khandi. The plaintiffs alleged that on the 25th the price was Rs. 240 per khandi; the defendant alleged that it was Rs. 217 per khandi, and counter-claimed accordingly. The plaintiffs adduced evidence of five cases of alleged actual dealings at Rs. 220 per khandi on the 25th May. The lower Court, however, was not satisfied that the contracts were made in relation to the true price of the day, and the Court of Appeal could not say that it had misappreciated the evidence on the point. The defendant called (among others) the Chairman of the Cotton Trade Association, by which the rate of Rs. 217 had been fixed for the 25th May. He, however, knew of no transactions at that rate. The lower Court found the rate on the 25th May, 1900, to have been Rs. 217 per khandi, and passed a decree for the defendant on the counter-claim against the plaintiffs. On appeal by the plaintiffs: Held, that there was no satisfactory direct evidence of the actual market rate on the 25th May, 1900, but that, as the evidence showed that the rate on the 23rd was Rs. 225 per khandi, and that the market was on the rise, the proved that on the due date the rate was not less than Rs. 225 per khandi, which therefore (and not Rs. 217) was the basis on which damages should be assessed. The Court of Appeal accordingly varied the decree of the Court below, and passed judgment for the plaintiffs. The question then arose whether, having regard to s. 20 of the Small Cause Courts Act (XV of 1882), as amended by s. 11 of Act I of 1895, the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs, the decree in their favour being for less than Rs. 1,000. Held, that no costs could be given. The mere fact that the plaintiffs claimed a sum in excess of the Small Cause Court jurisdiction was not enough to take the case out of the operation of s. 20. The result of the suit showed that the true amount or value of the subject matter was not above the Small Cause Court's limit. The Court of Appeal ordered that the defendant should get the costs in the lower Court of his counter-claim, and no more, but none of the general costs of suit or the costs incurred in connection with the plaintiff's claim. No costs of the appeal. SHRIDHAN GORINATH v. GORDHANDAS GOKULDAS (1901).

The lease contained a provision that it should be cancelled on default being made in payment of the rent and kist, and it contained no express covenant for quiet enjoyment. In 1887 default was made in payment of the rent and kist. A thereupon cancelled the lease, and sued X and Y, and obtained a decree for the arrears. In a suit by X for damages for breach of contract against A, the plaintiff alleged that certain raiyats setting up a false claim had evicted X from the lands demised at the instigation of A, who had subsequently sought unsuccessfully to obtain further advantages for himself. Held, that the plaintiff disclosed a good cause of action against the lessor; and that, even if the plaintiff had substantiated his allegations against his lessor, he would not have been entitled to recover the cost of civil and criminal proceedings against the raiyats who had evicted him. Mahomed Isa Khan v. The Tahsildar made the grant under rule VII on the 10th May 1897 and the grant stated that it was subject to the result of any appeal that might be preferred. There was a public road used by the villagers about 150 yards away, and 60 feet below the level of the eminence, but in the direct line of fire. 304A of the Penal Code have the same meaning as "does any act so rashly or negligently" in ss. 336, 337 and 338. S. 336 renders criminal the doing of any act so rashly or negligently as to endanger human life or the safety of others, irrespective of the consequences. Ss. 337 and 338 only impose a greater punishment when hurt or grievous hurt is the result of such rashness or negligence. S. 304A provides for the case of death by such rash or negligent act under circumstances not amounting to culpable homicide. Reg. v. Salmon, L. R. 6 Q. B. D. 79, and *Reg. v. 16. Fraudulent preference—Stat. 13 Eliz., c. 5—Transfer of property by insolvent in consideration of debt barred by limitation—Fraud—Conveyance in trust for payment of creditors—Hindu widow, duty of, to pay husband's creditors equally—Purchaser from Hindu widow—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 16, 17. The English Stat. 13 Eliz., c. 5, has not, as such, any operation in the mofussil of India, but it embodies principles of general application on account of their essential equity. An unequal disposition of property by a person in insolvent circumstances, and known to be so by the donee, will be set aside if impeached by creditors, except where the transferee has simply pressed a valid claim or made a purchase in good faith. The plaintiff G obtained a decree against M on the 30th September 1878. M died in April 1879, leaving A, a childless widow, him surviving. At his death, M was in insolvent circumstances. On the 7th June 1879, A conveyed by a deed of sale (exhibit 98) the whole of his property, consisting of a house and a garden, to the defendants, who were his separated brothers, in consideration of two time-barred debts due to them by her deceased husband. At the same time she executed in their favour a rent-note (exhibit 99) by which she agreed to pay them a nominal rent for her occupation of the house; but no rent was ever claimed or paid. On the same day the defendants passed an agreement, in writing (exhibit No. 114), to the widow, by which they undertook to settle the debts due to her.

G, in execution of his decree against M, attached the house conveyed by the sale-deed. The attachment was raised at the instance of the defendants, who claimed the house under the sale-deed (exhibit 98). Thereupon the plaintiff G brought the present suit to establish his right to attach and sell the house as the property of his judgment-debtor, M, in execution of his decree. The defendants relied upon the deed of sale executed by the widow (exhibit 98). Held, that the alleged sale to the defendants (exhibit 98) was not a real transaction supported by good consideration, and must be set aside in so far as it interfered with the execution of the plaintiff's decree. The transferees were not purchasers for money, or even creditors diligent in pressing an enforceable right. They were members of the vendor's family, and the consideration they gave consisted of old and barred claims that could not be enforced. Payment of such debts by a transfer of the insolvent's whole estate, to the disappointment of creditors whose claims were not barred, was in itself a fraud. Being made to near relatives acquainted with the facts, it would not be regarded as a real and practical transaction. Held, also, that the agreement at any moment by the concurrence of the parties to it. If that agreement was independent of the conveyance (exhibit 98) of the property to the defendants, the latter had no consideration ment (exhibit 114) was connected with the conveyance (exhibit 98), the exclusion of its terms from that document and the secrecy observed about it stamped the transaction with fraud, whether the transfer was real or only fraudulent. There was no honest trust for distribution which could defeat the plaintiff's execution. M might have preferred one creditor to another having an equal right, and the fact that the creditor was his brother did not make such a preference improper. But although M might have preferred one creditor to another, his widow could not do so. She took her husband's estate as an aggregate, assets and debts together. She was in some degree a trustee and at any rate under a legal obligation to pay her deceased husband's debts, and to pay them as far as she could equally. She was not at liberty to deal capri-

her, to prefer one valid claim to another, as her husband might have done. This advantage a creditor might have obtained from her husband by his diligence, but on her no pressure could be exercised except through the estate which she was bound, pressure or no pressure, to distribute among the creditors. A purchaser from a Hindu widow must see that she exercised her power of sale strictly, or at least satisfy himself that a sufficient cause for alienation exists. If the defendants told the widow that the claims, in consideration of which she made the conveyance to them, were barred by limitation, then clearly she had joined with them in a scheme for depriving the judgment-creditors of their due. If they did not tell her, they deceived her by their silence when, as near relatives getting an advantage, they were bound, in dealing with an ignorant woman, to put her in possession of all the material facts. 17. — Fraudulent conveyance—Gift in fraud of creditors—Subsequent sale by creditors in execution of subject-matter of gift—Purchase at execution-sale for inadequate price by means of fraud In June 1875, A, being in pecuniary difficulties, executed a deed of gift of all his property in favour of his wife and minor sons, the plaintiffs B, one of his then existing creditors, subsequently obtained a decree against him, and in execution sold part of the said property. At the sale, the first defendant, by means of false representation, became the purchaser at an inadequate price. In July 1879, A applied to have the sale set aside, on the ground of the fraud of the first defendant, but his application was rejected. In 1884 the plaintiffs by their next friend sued to set aside the sale, contending that at the date of B's decree the property was theirs by virtue of the deed of gift of June 1875, and further that the sale was void by reason of the defendant's fraud. Held, rejecting the plaintiffs' claim, that the plaintiffs could not be allowed to set up their deed of gift as against the proceedings in execution under which the defendant acquired his title as purchaser. That gift was made to them by A when he was in pecuniary difficulties, and included all A's property. It was, therefore, void as against his then existing creditors, of whom B was one. B was, therefore, entitled to sell the property in execution of his decree. KORNUMATI V. COWASJI

The plaintiff's objection to the attachment by the defendant having been disallowed, he brought the present suit against the defendant, to establish his right to the property attached under his sale-deed. The defendant contended (inter alia) that the sale to the plaintiff, having been effected in order to delay and defeat the creditors and to give of which the plaintiff had been pressing, and Rs 3,400 in cash; and that there were no circumstances in the case which showed that the plaintiff in entering into it was a party to any scheme to delay the general body of the creditors. That being the case, the sale was not impeachable at the instance of preference, and as such perhaps be impeachable at the suit of the whole body of creditors. In re Johnson, Golden v. Gillam, L. R. 20 Ch D. 353, referred to and followed. MOTILAL RAVICHAND V. UTAM JAGJIVANDAS. I. L. R. 13 Bom. 434

Notwithstanding this, two creditors named in the deed immediately sued for their debts, and obtained decrees. Other creditors named in the deed afterwards bringing the present suit to enforce their rights under the mortgage, it appeared that the intention and agreement was that the deed should not take effect unless all the creditors came in and were bound by it. Held, that, the suits abovementioned having been brought before the expiration of the period agreed upon, the consideration for the mortgage had failed, and the creditors could not sue the firm on the mortgage-deed. AJUDHIA PRASAD V. A genuine sale made for good and valid consideration to one creditor, even if effected to delay and defeat another, apart from cases in which either insolvency or bankruptcy is involved, is not void. If a man owes another a real debt, and in satisfaction thereof sells to his creditor an equivalent portion of his property, transferring it to the vendee, and thereby extinguishing the debt, the transaction cannot be assailed, though the effect of it is to give the selected creditor a preference. *Wood v. Subsequently the creditor obtained a simple money-decree against the defendant, and in execution thereof attached the four-annas share. It is not invalid if made subject to a condition requiring assenting creditors to execute a release of the debtor, nor is it invalid if it declares a resulting trust in favour of the debtor; but semble. that the Court might order such resulting trust to be executed for the benefit of judgment-creditors who decline to assent to the assignment. defendant executed a deed, whereby he assigned all his property to the plaintiff and three other persons as trustees in trust for the payment of his creditors. The deed was executed by the plaintiff and the other trustees both as trustees and as creditors. It contained no release and no agreement by the creditors to take less than the full amount of their debts. It conveyed all the defendant's property to the trustees, who were to collect the estate and divide it rateably among the creditors "without prejudice to the rights of the several creditors to recover" the balance (if any) which might remain due to them after receiving such rateable distribution, and it declared that the said agreement for the payment of the debts was accepted by the creditors, and that, "upon payment to the said creditors, respectively, of the full or whole amount of their respective claims, these presents shall operate as fully and effectually as an order of discharge from the Insolvent Court in respect for himself, his heirs, executors, and administrators, doth hereby covenant with the said debtor, his heirs, executors, and administrators, that he or they will not, if the said debtor shall pay the said full amount of the debts due by him or his said firm of V J to the said creditors, bring any action, suit, or proceeding against them or any of them for or in respect of the debts now due from the said debtor or the said firm of V J to the said creditors respectively." On the execution of this deed, the trustees took possession of defendant's books of accounts, and proceeded to recover the defendant's estate. The three months for which, as above mentioned, the suit was adjourned in April 1894, having now expired, it came on for hearing. The defendant pleaded the deed, and contended that the plaintiff, having accepted the trust and signed the deed, was not entitled to continue the suit against him. Held, that it would be inequitable that the defendant, having handed over all his property to four of his creditors as trustees with a view to the payment of his debts in full, should be harassed by one of those creditors who had accepted the trust. The conduct of the

The firm was subsequently dissolved, and its assets were assigned to a third party. This, however, was no real concession, because the right to mesne profits had no existence. Although the unqualified admission of a debt implies a promise to pay it, yet this implication does not necessarily follow where there is an express promise to pay in a particular manner, and on a certain event happening. Held, on the construction of the bond, that here the admission was referable to the particular obligation agreed to be discharged only in the manner stipulated; and that therefore the payment was to be contingent on there being mesne profits. Held, also, that it had not been established that the non-occurrence of the condition had been occasioned by the conduct or default of the defendants, and that, therefore, the objection to pay the sum in question never took effect or became enforceable. *KALEA SINGH v. upon the hypothecation-bond and obtained a personal decree against the present plaintiff, which was ex parte, the amount of the decree being declared to be charged on the land in the possession of defendants Nos. 2 to 4. Meanwhile, defendant No. 1 who was the assignee of the mortgage of 1882, had obtained a decree upon it against defendant No. 4. This decree not having been executed, he subsequently sued upon the mortgage again and obtained a decree against defendants Nos. 2 to 4. The plaintiff now sued to have the last-mentioned decree set aside and recover the balance of the purchase-money from defendants Nos. 2 to 4. The Court of first instance passed a decree for the amount claimed, and declared it to be charged on the land. Defendant No. 1 preferred an appeal, in which defendants Nos. 2 to 4 were joined by the Court of first appeal, which dismissed the suit. Held, that plaintiff, having allowed a decree to be passed against him ex parte in the suit of the holder of the hypothecation-bond, and having obtained a collusive discharge from the other partner, was not entitled to recover against the defendants. *KANAGAPPA v. On the 7th April 1877, one N, executed a trust-deed, whereby certain immovable property belonging to him was conveyed to trustees in trust for himself for life or until he became insolvent or attempted to alienate, assign, or encumber the same, and then for his wife and children. At the date of the deed, N was largely indebted, and two or three months prior to the date of the deed he had deposited the bulk of his moveable property with a friend, who endeavoured to compromise with his (N's) creditors, and who applied the said property in paying off a portion of his debts. About a fortnight after the trust-deed was executed, N filed a suit against one H and others. That suit was dismissed, and N was ordered to pay H's costs. In execution of that decree for costs, H, in July 1882, attached a house which was part of the property settled by the trust-deed of April 1877. Thereupon the trustee of the deed claimed to have the attachment removed, alleging that he was in possession as trustee. He took out a summons for that purpose which was dismissed on the 19th December 1882, without prejudice to the rights of the parties to file a suit in respect of the subject-matter thereof. No suit, however, was filed by any of the parties, and the house was sold in execution. H, the execution-creditor, bought it at the sale, and was put into possession, which he retained until his death in December 1883. After his death, his executors took possession.

They desired to sell it, but were unable to do so, in consequence of the claim put forward by N's wife and children (defendants Nos 1, 3, and 4) under the trust-deed of 1877. They accordingly filed this suit against N's wife and children (defendants Nos 1, 3, and 4) and the surviving trustee of the trust (defendant No 2), praying for a declaration that the defendants had no right or interest, present or future or contingent, in the said property that they (the plaintiffs), as executors of H, were absolutely entitled to it, and that the trust-deed was fraudulent and void against the plaintiffs and other creditors of N. It was contended that the suit was barred under Art. 95 of Sch. II of the Limitation Act, XV of 1877, having been filed more than three years after 1882, at which date the fraud was alleged by H himself and relied on by him in the attachment proceedings. Held, that the suit did not fall within Art. 95, and was not barred. The substantial prayer of the plaint was a declaration that the plaintiffs were absolute owners of the property in suit, and the basis on which that prayer was rested was the sale to H in 1883. The "relief" asked for was the declaration of the plaintiffs' absolute title, the "ground" of the relief was the acquisition of that title by virtue of the certificate of sale, coupled with a denial of it by the defendants. Such a case did not come within the purview of Art. 95. It was further contended that the effect of the order in December 1882, dismissing the summons which had been taken out by the trustees to having the attachment removed, was to declare the trust settlement invalid, and that, as no steps had been taken by the trustees against whom that order was made to establish the validity of the trust within a year from the date of that order, the defendants could not now rely on their rights as cestui que trust under that deed. It was argued that the Judge, in dismissing the summons, must have intended to pronounce the whole settlement invalid, having regard to s. 280 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), because otherwise he ought, according to that section, to have ordered, in express terms, the removal of the attachment from the reversionary estate of wife and children. Held, that the portion of s. 280 relied on only applies where the property is in the possession of the judgment-debtor "partly on his own account and partly on account of some other person." Here the property was at the time of the attachment, and had been for some months previously, in the sole possession of the trustee, and neither wholly nor partly in the possession of the judgment-debtor. The conditions under which the latter

It was proved that at or before the date of the settlement N was largely indebted. Nearly the whole of his moveable property had been deposited with a friend in order that the creditors might be compromised with and a portion of his debts paid off, and under those circumstances he made a settlement of this moveable property, which was all that could really be said to have then belonged to him on the eve of the litigation which was about to commence. But Held, also, dismissing the suit, that the plaintiffs

It was contended in defence that the deed created a trust for the payment of K's debts, and that the defendant was entitled to tack on to the mortgage debt a simple contract which K owed to him. It was found that the defendant was the only unpaid creditor, and that the property was more than sufficient to pay the debt. Held, that the deed did not create a trust for K's creditors, the object, on the contrary, being the preservation of the family property. Held, further, that due effect could not be given to the whole of the instrument, unless construed as a conveyance to the plaintiff, charged as between himself and K with the payment of K's debts. Held, also, that during K's life his creditors could not claim to be paid under this instrument, in the absence of any communication between them and the plaintiff, capable of being construed as an admission by him that he held the property as trustee for them, although they might possibly impeach it. certain firm gave its creditors jointly, and not severally, a mortgage on certain immoveable property as security for the payment of the debts due to them by the firm, the consideration for such mortgage being a promise by all the creditors not to sue the firm for their debts for a certain time. Before the expiration of such time, several of the creditors sued for their debts. Subsequently several of the creditors brought separate suits against the firm to enforce the mortgage in respect of their debts. Held, that the consideration for the contract of mortgage, viz., the forbearance of all the creditors not to sue for their debts for a fixed time, having failed, the firm was discharged from liability on the mortgage. Held, also, that, had the contract of mortgage remained in force, it would not have been competent for individual creditors to come into Court and enforce the contract in respect of their separate debts. *SIDH GOPAL v. Suit by creditor to set aside—Suit by creditor on his own behalf and also on behalf of all creditors—Civil Procedure Code (XIV of 1882), s. 30—Misjoinder—Practice—Notice of assignment—Mahomedan law—Mushaa—Assignment of undivided share. On the 25th July, 1898, the plaintiff obtained a decree against the second defendant, and in execution attached (as belonging to the said defendant No. 2) a one-third share of the interest accruing upon certain moneys in the hands of the Accountant General of Bombay. The said one-third share was thereupon claimed by the first defendant (wife of defendant No. 2), who alleged that it had been assigned to her by her husband (defendant No. 2) by a deed of assignment executed by him on the 15th October, 1886. The plaintiff now sued to have that assignment set aside, contending that it was a sham and colour-

plaintiff in his own right and also on behalf of all the other creditors of defendant No. 2. It was objected on behalf of the defendants that this was a misjoinder of causes of action; and that in his own right the plaintiff sued to have the deed set aside as void, while on behalf of the other creditors he sued for a declaration that it was voidable. Held, that there was no misjoinder. The plaintiff and the creditors had one cause of action, viz., the right to treat the deed as one which would not affect their rights. It was further contended that the assignment was not valid, because no notice of it was given to the Accountant General, who had possession of the money assigned. Held, that the omission to give notice of assignment to the Accountant General did not invalidate the assignment. It was lastly contended that the parties were Suni Mahomedans, and that according to the Suni law an assignment of an undivided share (mushaa) of property was invalid. Held, that the rule did not apply, inasmuch as the assignment was of a definite share of the money in the hands of the Accountant General. On the merits the plaintiff's claim was dismissed. DEHAHIMBHAI RAHIMBHAI v. FULBAI (1902)

Plaintiff's predecessor, who had a larsha lease, obtained a permanent lease from the shabait of an idol, the predecessor of defendant No. 2, on payment of a bonus, and the latter, who is the present shabait, continued to receive rent from plaintiff. Two of the three shabait concerned subsequently parted with their interest as lessors to the lessee. No evidence was adduced as to what happened to the money raised by such transactions; Held, that this was not justifiable in the interest of the endowment. Nawab Sir Syed Hossain Ali Khan v. Mohant Bhagwan Das, 11 C. W. N. 261, distinguished. The lease granting the above mourasi recited that the necessity for such a demise was that the shebaitis might be called on to fill up a tank on the property which they could not afford the means to do; Held, that such necessity was illusory and the mere advisability of filling up a tank did not constitute a necessity to justify alienation of the trust property. In an ejectment suit, the defendant pleaded exclusive possession and demed the title of plaintiffs as landlords of certain premises claimed by the latter as appertaining to a debutter of which they were present shebaitis. The plaintiffs contended that it was not open to the defendant to fall back upon the title under a mourasi lease purported to have been granted by previous shebaitis to the defendant's predecessors in title; Held, that the effect of the defendant's plea was merely to put the plaintiffs to the proof of a title which would justify their prayer for ejectment and did not prevent the defendant from relying on the mourasi lease. Where a defendant claims to be in possession of endowed property as a tenant under a mourasi lease granted by previous shebaitis and the successors of the latter seek to recover possession on the ground that the lease was invalid: Held, that if the grant of such a lease constituted an alienation which it was beyond the power of the lessors to make, then, the lessee is to be taken as a trespasser and his possession is not deemed to be that of the lessors from evidence, that the mourasi lease granted to the defendant's predecessors in title created a new holding and that the principle laid down in Nitya Gopal Sen Poddar v. Mani Chanda Chakrabutty, 12

The plaintiffs brought a suit for certain immoveable property as the next reversionary heirs of a deceased Hindu, and the only relief they claimed was possession on the allegation that their mother, who had succeeded to a woman's estate in the property, was dead. Held, that on the finding by the Court that the allegations made by the alleged mother were not justified by legal necessity, and that the plaintiffs were really her sons, which were both denied, were merely argumentative steps towards the only decree sought, namely, possession; and under the circumstances the Court was not entitled to make a declaratory decree in the plaintiffs' favour on those allegations

The proviso to s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, that "no Court shall pass a declaratory decree where the plaintiff, being able to seek further relief than a mere declaration of title, omits to do so," refers to the position of plaintiff at the date of suit. Where a suit was brought for a declaration that certain alienations of land made by a Hindu widow to the defendants were not binding on plaintiff, her reversionary heir, and, pending appeal by the plaintiff, the widow died:—Held, (i) that the plaintiff was entitled to proceed with his appeal; (ii) that plaintiff could not be permitted to amend his plaint and claim possession. *GOVINDA v. 1. — Hostile document affecting title—Right to sue to have it declared invalid. When a person in possession finds that a document has been set up and registered which affects his title, and which every day's delay is likely to render him less able to disprove, he is justified in coming before the Court and asking that such a deed may be declared inoperative. MUHAMMAD BANOO v. MAHOMED SUFDAN . . . 24 W. R. 336

2. — Suit to set aside mortgage—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 15—Injury not admitting specific relief. Act VIII of 1859, s. 15, did not give power to the Court to give a declaratory decree, unless the position of the parties is one of hostility to one another. The plaintiff must come into Court with some definite complaint and, bring that person into Court merely for the purpose of getting the Court to clear up difficulties, whether of fact or law, which may have arisen between himself and the defendant. He must generally allege and rely upon some cause of action against the defendant, except in that class of cases in which the Court gives its aid towards the fulfilment of trusts, and this principle is not affected by s. 15 of Act VIII of 1859. Therefore where a plaintiff bought, at a sale in execution of a decree, the right, title, and interest of one defendant, a judgment-debtor, in a ship, and by his plaint sought to discover the bond fides of certain transactions by way of mortgage between the judgment-debtor and the other defendants, and asked a declaration that he, as purchaser, was entitled to the right, title, and interest of the judgment-debtor; or in case it should appear that, at the time of the attachment in execution, the ship was the property of the judgment-debtor, subject to any valid lien or charge in the hands of the other defendants or either of them affecting the same, then the amount of such lien or charge might be ascertained, and the plaintiff as such purchaser might be declared entitled to redeem the same. Held, that the plaintiff was barred upon the face of it. But as it appeared, taking the plaint and evidence together, that there was some substantial dispute between the parties relative to the defendant's mortgage, the Court, to prevent further litigation, construed the plaint as having asked that the alleged mortgage might be set aside. *JALLAN BRUGMAN DOSS v. The widow took possession of the estate and executed an ikramama, wherein, after reciting that she was in possession "without the co-parcenary of any one," she declared that "B, the grandson of me, the declarant, is the heir of my late husband and of me, the declarant," and that all the property was "the right of B as aforesaid," and continued:—"During the life of me, the declarant, I am in possession without the co-shareship of any one, and will continue to be so; after my death, B will get possession of the whole of the moveable and immoveable properties appertaining to the estate of my late husband. No one else has the right or demand to the same; therefore, these words have been written and given as an ikramama, that it may be of use when occasion arises." Under the ikramama, proceedings were completed for mutation of names in favour of B. Subsequently to the execution of the ikramama, P gave birth to the plaintiff, and shortly afterwards died. The plaintiff, on attaining his majority and during the life of the widow and R, brought a suit against B to have the ikramama set aside and declared void as against him, and for a declaration of his right to a moiety of the estate of his grandfather on the death of the widow. Held, that he had no cause of action. BEHARY LALL MOHURWAR v. On the other hand, if the widow had an estate in possession, given to her in exchange for her maintenance, she had an interest which she was competent to alienate. Held, also, that, inasmuch as the deed of mortgage contained no description of the amount of the estate mortgaged by the widow, and upon its

Also that the awarding of declaratory relief, as regulated by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, is a discretionary power which Courts of equity are empowered to exercise with reference to the circumstances of each case and the nature of the facts stated in the plaint, and the prayer of the plaintiff; that so long as a Court of first instance possesses jurisdiction to entertain a declaratory suit, and, entering into the merits of the case, arrives at right conclusions and awards a declaratory decree, such a decree cannot be reversed in appeal simply because the discretion has been improperly exercised; and that such improper exercise of discretion, under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, has no higher footing than that of an error, defect, or irregularity, not affecting the merits of the case or the jurisdiction of the Court, within the meaning of s. 578 of the Civil Procedure Code. This does not imply that, even in cases where the discretionary power to award declaratory relief has been exercised wholly arbitrarily, and in a manner grossly inconsistent with judicial principles, the Court of appeal would have no power to interfere. Ram Kanaye

17. — Denial of title without injurious act—Annoyance. In suits for a declaration of title to a divided share of ancestral property, the ground alleged in each case for seeking the declaration was that the representatives of the brothers of the plaintiff's father had refused to be parties to the registering of the property in plaintiff's name, and had executed a deed of sale of it to a third party (third defendant), and registered him as the purchaser. The Court of first instance in each case decreed for the plaintiff. The Appellate Court, following Padaqqaligum Pillai v. Shanmugham Pillai, 2 Mad 333, dismissed the suits on the ground that the plaintiffs were not in a position to maintain them. On special appeal:—Held, that the suits should be remanded for a declaration of the plaintiff's title, if established. To maintain a suit for a declaration of title, some adverse act, intended and calculated to be prejudicial to the title which the plaintiff seeks a declaration of, must appear to have been done by the defendant. The mere denial of the title, or doing an act which causes annoyance, cannot imperil the plaintiff's title, nor have any serious effect on the quiet enjoyment of his proprietary right, and is not sufficient to support such a suit. The principle upon which the decision in Padaqqaligum Pillai v. Shanmugham Pillai proceeds, is inapplicable to suits under s. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code. *KARYAN v. PERIA SIDDEN. KARYAN v. He applied to the Court to have the sale set aside, but failing in his application he sued both the decree-holder and the auction-purchaser for a declaration of his title to the property in question. The Assistant Judge held on appeal that the suit was not maintainable on the grounds that a separate suit could not be brought, as the question of title was one for decision in the execution-proceedings, and that, even if the point could be raised in a separate suit, the present suit was premature, as the plaintiff should have waited till he was dispossessed by the auction-purchaser. Held, that the suit was not premature. It was found that the plaintiffs had separated themselves from the defendants, and had for more than twelve years been excluded to their own knowledge from the joint family property. Held, that if, as alleged by the plaintiffs, plaintiff No. 1 was the de jure ejaman of the family, he was entitled to the possession and management of the family property, and a suit for a mere declaration of his right would not lie. *Chandu v. The defendants contended that the suit was not maintainable because the plaintiff had sued for a mere declaration of title without asking for consequential relief. Held (CANDY, J., doubting), that the suit was barred under s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, as the plaintiff had omitted to seek the relief of an injunction against defendant No. 1, restraining him from receiving future payment of maintenance. Held, further, that plaintiff was at liberty to amend his plaint by praying for an injunction as against both defendants. SARDAR-SINGJI v. 60. — Executor or administrator of a shareholder, rights of—Specific Relief Act (I of 1877), s. 42—"Holding a share," Meaning of—Agreement, Construction of—Objection taken for first time in appeal. Prior to the year 1803, W' W' carried on an extensive timber trade in Burma. In that year the defendant company was formed for the purpose of taking over the business from him together with the capital and assets engaged therein. The nominal capital of the company was Rs 25,00,000, divided into one thousand shares of Rs 2,500 each. On the 22nd July 1864, an agreement carrying out the above object was executed between W' W' and the defendant company. This agreement set forth the assets and property to be transferred, and classified them as (a) "fixed assets," which consisted of immovable property, buildings, etc., valued at Rs 7,78,000 or thereabouts; and (b) assets other than fixed assets which consisted of what was called "forest operations," and of valuable contracts, rights, and concessions from the King of Burma, etc. The agreement further specified the consideration to be paid to W' W' for each of these classes of assets. For the "fixed assets" he was (under the 12th clause of the agreement) to receive one hundred fully paid-up shares of the Company. That clause contained certain provisions as to the payment of the ordinary dividend up to the date of the agreement, but not to any assignment made by him, his executors or administrators of the shares, or any of them, within five years from the date of the registration of the company. For the remaining assets it was provided by the 13th clause of the agreement that W' W', his executors or administrators, should be entitled, so long as he or they should hold the entia dividend was to be one-third of such surplus net profits. The said 13th clause also provided that, if W W died within the above stated period of five years, his executors or administrators should not be entitled to the said extra or preferential dividend after the expiration of the said period, notwithstanding they might continue to hold the said shares. Subsequently to the execution of this agreement, the business and assets were transferred to the company by W W, and one hundred fully paid up shares were duly allotted to him under cl 12, and his name was entered on the register of shareholders. In 1888, W W, then domiciled in England, died. By his will he appointed his three brothers—R W, L A W, and A F W—his executors, and he directed that his executors should hold the said shares and all his interest therein and attached to the holding thereof upon trust for such of his said brothers as might survive him, if more than one, as joint tenants. R W died in the testator's lifetime, and only A F W proved the will. On the 27th September 1888, letters of administration, with the will annexed, were granted by the High Court of Bombay to the plaintiff in this suit (F Y S) as attorney for the said executor A F W. On the 20th September 1889, the said letters of administration were produced to, and registered with, the defendant company. The hundred shares continued to stand in the testator's

Save for this entry, the register remained unaltered after the testator's death. that he was only entitled to the preferential dividends if, at the time when such dividends were declared, he was holding the shares in the capacity of executor and as an undistributed part of the testator's estate. They insisted that the plaintiff should prove that he so held the shares before he could be entitled to the declaration sought for. The executor was examined in England on commission. He deposed that the estate had been got in, and the debts paid; that the estate had not been divided, because it would not be in accordance with the private wishes of the testator which they (i.e. he and his brother L A W) were aware of; that apart from these private wishes, there was no reason why the estate should not be divided between his brother and himself. Held, by FARRAN, J., and by the Court of appeal, that the plaintiff was entitled to the declaration sought for. The executor or his attorney (the plaintiff) was still the registered holder of the shares, and under cl 13 of the agreement it was intended

Held by the Court of appeal, that the present case was one in which, in the interests of both parties, the Court, in the exercise of a sound discretion, should make a declaration as to the right in question. The right was existent, and although the exercise of it was undoubtedly contingent on there being a balance of profits as contemplated by cl 13 of the agreement, the very nature of the agreement assumed that there might, and probably would, be such a balance, and a large sum had been already applied towards the dividend in question. Further, it was intended that the directors should exercise their discretion as to the amount to be carried to the reserve fund, upon which the balance of profit available for the preferential dividend depended. It was therefore, from the very nature of the case, important that the directors should know for certain whether the right to a preferential dividend was still in existence as contended by the plaintiff, or had come to an end. The circumstance, moreover, that the objection had been taken for the first time on appeal would by itself be fatal to it. BOMBAY-BURMAN TRADING CORPORATION v. SMITH

—Rights of attaching creditor—Suit by one attaching creditor for declaration that property cannot be attached by another creditor on the ground that the second creditor's decree was bad in law—Cause of action. The plaintiffs, as judgment-creditors who had attached under a decree for money certain immovable property of their judgment-debtors, sued another judgment-creditor who attached the same property, asking for a declaration that the property attached was not saleable in execution of the second judgment-creditor's decree. The suit was based upon the allegation that the

decree impugned had not been obtained by means of fraud. Held, that the plaintiffs as attaching creditors had no cause of action. The decree assailed might have been a bad decree in law, but it was the decree of a Court which had jurisdiction, and it was not tainted with fraud. Moti Lal v. Karabulain, I. L. The Court of first instance dismissed the case on the ground that the defendants had shown that the tenure was not liable to enhancement. On appeal to the Judge, the plaintiff's suit was dismissed on the ground that he had not proved service of notice, but a declaratory decree was given that the tenure was liable to enhancement. Held, that the Judge should simply have dismissed the suit; Act X of 1859 gives him no power to make such a declaratory decree. *NARAYAN MIZANAR v. 1. — Order convicting of mischief—Civil Procedure Code, 1859, s. 15—Suit after criminal proceedings under ss 430, 432, Penal Code. Certain criminal proceedings having been successfully taken against the plaintiff's tenants for mischief done in respect to a nulka, causing under either s. 430 or 432 (injury or obstruction to flow of water) of the Penal Code, the plaintiff brought a suit in the Civil Court for a declaration that the nulka was his own exclusive property, and therefore not such a stream as could come under either of those sections. Held, that it was within the discretion of the Court under s. 15 of the Civil Procedure Code to allow such a suit to be brought. *KARTICK PARAMANICK v. 2. — Order as to nuisance—Suit to set aside order of Magistrate under Act XXV of 1861, ss. 303 to 315—Jurisdiction of Civil Court. The plaintiff built a bridge over a certain khal (canal), which was removed by order of the Magistrate under Ch. XX of the Criminal Procedure Code; the defendant, it was alleged, set the Magistrate in motion. The plaintiff now sued the defendant for a declaration of his right to erect the bridge in question, and to have the order of the Magistrate set aside. Held, that no such suit would lie. The plaintiff thereupon brought this suit against the Secretary of State for India in Council for a declaration that the land on which the ott stood was his property, and not that of the Government. Held, that, the public roads being vested by s. 37 of the Land Revenue Code (Bombay Act V of 1879) in the Government of Bombay, they were “interested to deny” the plaintiff's title to the land, and, therefore, under s. 42 of the Specific

The property of the tarwad was valued by plaintiffs at Rs. 3,000 and this was held to be a true valuation, but it appeared that the value of the plaintiff's interest in it was Rs. 2,000 only. In a previous suit between the parties, which had been brought in the Court of a District Munsif, it had been held that the parties belonged to the same family; and this finding had been upheld on appeal. Plaintiffs did not ask, by way of further relief, for possession of a portion of the property, which was in the enjoyment of the defendants. Held, that the suit was barred, both as res judicata and by s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act. property—No claim for partition—Maintainability—Hindu law—Existence of leases over family property no bar to partition. Plaintiff sued his brother, his sister, and his brother's son for a declaration of invalidity of a will, which purported to have been executed by his late father, and by which certain property had been bequeathed to one of the defendants. Plaintiff claimed that the property was ancestral; that he was entitled to his share in it by right of survivorship, and that the testator had no power to bequeath it. No claim was made in the plaint for partition of the property, which was stated to be in the possession of tenants under leases granted by plaintiff and first defendants. Held, that the suit was barred by the proviso to s. 42 of the Specific Relief Act, inasmuch as plaintiff might have sued for partition of his share in what he claimed to be the joint family property. 12. ———— Refund of purchase-money—Decree on appeal. In reversing a decree on appeal, the Court should state the relief which they consider the appellant entitled to. A purchased a Government revenue-paying estate from B, but on going to take possession he found C, who claimed under a patni grant, also from B, in possession. A case was, therefore, instituted by B under Act IV of 1840, but it was ordered that C should be retained in possession. A then brought a suit against B and C to recover his purchase-money. No relief was asked against C, nor had C anything to do with the sale from B to A. The suit was dismissed. On appeal it was ordered merely

The prayer of the plaintiff was "that the defendants may either be held personally responsible on the

It appeared clear to the Judge below, on the evidence, that the defendants acted as principals, and he treated the case on the issue of fraud alone. Ten cases only of the fifty-eight were selected by the plaintiffs, on which they gave evidence of the fraud; and the Judge found in their favour as to three, and held that the plaintiff charging fraud, the plaintiffs could not succeed on any cause of action incidentally disclosed. The decree was drawn up with reference only to the three cases on which the fraud was found, so far as

36. ——— Suit for contribution in respect of money deposited by the plaintiffs to save the property, of which they were co-sharers, from being sold for arrears of revenue—Personal liability. In a suit for contribution by the plaintiffs against the defendants, the Court of first instance gave the plaintiffs a decree against one defendant and exonerated the others. On an appeal by the defendant against whom the decree was passed, the Appellate Court directed the defendants exonerated by the first Court to be added as respondents, set aside the decree against the appealing defendant, and passed a decree against the defendants, who were added as respondents, as representatives of one S, and ordered the amount so decreed to be recovered from the estate of her (S's) husband. On appeal to the High Court by the defendants, who were thus made liable, on the ground that the liability to contribution being the personal liability of S, then not being her estate, the decree does not create a charge on the estate, the persons liable would not be the reversionary heirs to S's husband's estates, but those who would inherit her estate. UPENDRA LAL MUKERJEE v. Demand was made, but was not complied with, whereupon plaintiffs informed defendants by letter that their account carried interest at the higher rate provided for in the promissory note. Plaintiffs now sued for the amount due in respect of principal and interest at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum from the date of their letter till payment, and asked that, in default of payment on a day to be fixed by the Court, the property might be sold. A decree having been passed in plaintiffs' favour, provision was made therein ordering defendants to pay the amount of principal and interest due at the date of the decree, with interest thereon at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum from that date to a date six months thereafter. Demand was made, but was not complied with, whereupon plaintiffs informed defendants by letter that their account earned interest at the higher rate provided for in the promissory note. Plaintiffs now sued for the amount due in respect of principal and interest at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum from the date of their letter till payment, and asked that, in default of payment on a day to be fixed by the Court, the property might be sold. A decree having been passed in plaintiffs' favour, provision was made therein ordering defendants to pay the amount of principal and interest due at the date of the decree, with interest thereon at the rate of 15 per cent. per annum from that date to a date six months thereafter. Objection having been taken to the form of this decree on the ground that payment of interest at the contract rate was only provided for up to the termination of six months from the date of decree, instead of till payment: Held, that the decree was correctly drawn. A talukhdar of the Ahmedabad district mortgaged his talukhdari property in 1886. In 1892, the mortgagee sued to enforce his lien by sale of the mortgaged property. different degrees of pre-emption, the decree, in at least one of the rival suits, must be essentially defective if no provision is made for the contingency of the superior pre-emptor never enforcing his right. The question what should be the form of the decree in such cases can be dealt with only by exercising the vast and flexible jurisdiction possessed by the Courts of equity in adapting their decrees to the exigencies of each case, so as to grant the actual relief required by the parties. Held, applying the principles of equity to the present case, that the Court of first instance acted rightly in adding the name of each rival pre-emptor as party defendant in the suit of the other, and in decreeing the claim of vendee, his suit should have been decreed against the latter in the terms of s. 214 of the Civil Procedure Code; subject, however, to the condition that the decree should not take effect, so far as the enforcement of pre-emption was concerned, in the event of R's enforcing the superior pre-emptive right decreed to him. *KASHI NATH v. 74. — Mortgage-decree directing accounts, etc., to be taken and report given—Tender of principal and interest before report—Refusal to accept tender and subsequent charge of interest. A decree directed accounts to be taken of what was due for principal and interest under a mortgage, such interest to be allowed "up to the time of payment hereinafter mentioned, or until six months from the date of the decree," whichever first should happen, and further directed the plaintiff to pay what should be reported due for principal and interest up to the date of payment, and costs with interest at six per cent. from the date of taxation until payment, within six months after the Registrar should make his report. The plaintiff tendered a sum sufficient to cover the principal and interest due, but insufficient to cover costs at a time prior to the drawing up of the Registrar's report. Held, that the payment of principal and interest "hereinafter mentioned" referred to a time after the Registrar had made his report, because the sum to be paid was a sum reported to be due by the Registrar, and that, therefore, a tender, made before the Registrar's report was given, was not a sufficient tender to stop interest from the date of the tender. ADMINISTRATOR GENERAL OF BENGAL v. AHMED BEGG

75. — Execution—Claim of interest not provided by the decree—Acquiescence. A mortgage decree ordered payment of Rs 1,415-10-6 before March 1886, but contained no provision as to interest. In execution of this decree, the defendant presented several applications (darikhasts), the last of which was in 1898, whereby he sought to recover Rs 2,570-4-5 as principal and interest and in default to have the amount realized by sale of the property. On the 2nd March, and again on the 7th August 1900, the judgment-debtor got the sale postponed saying that he would satisfy the decree. On the 12th October 1900 the plaintiff again asked for execution.

At last on the 20th Sept. 1900 the sale was ordered.

for a fresh sale. On that date, no steps having been taken by the decree-holder, the case was ordered to be struck off "for the present." On the 13th January 1906, the decree-holder again applied asking that the property, which was still under attachment, might be sold. Held, that this was not a fresh application in execution, but merely an application to revive the former proceedings, and was not barred by limitation. *Dukhiram Srimani v. 65. — Procedure—Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882), s. 244—Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882), s. 93. An application for redemption or foreclosure of a decree nisi is not an application in execution under the Civil Procedure Code, but must be made in Court under the Transfer of Property Act; and until a decree nisi is made absolute there is no decree capable of execution. Where a decree nisi contemplated an account being taken, but was silent as to how that account was to be taken, and the Court has declined to modify the decree by inserting such a direction, it would be out of the question to compel a party in execution-proceedings to do that which he is not directed to do by the decree. *Ajudhia Pershad v. ## (j) FORFEITURE.

66. — Stipulation involving forfeiture—Penalty—Consent decree. A consent decree provided that the defendant should retain possession of certain land in perpetuity on payment of a fixed annual rent to the plaintiff, but that the plaintiff might re-enter in case the defendant failed to pay the rent. The rent was not paid, and the transferee of the plaintiff's interest under the decree sued for possession. The defendant contended that the above clause in the decree was a penal stipulation which the Court would not enforce. Held, that the doctrine of penalties was not applicable to stipulations contained in decrees, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. *SHIREKULI TIMAPA HEGDA v. ## (l) HINDU WIDOW.

68. — Hindu widow—Construction of order made by Settlement Officer awarding estate to a Hindu widow—Transfer by widow, effect of. The plaintiffs obtained a declaratory decree that they were the reversioners and heirs apparent, expectant on the future death of a widow who, at the time of suit, had survived two co-widows, and that they, the plaintiffs, would be entitled to inherit at her death the estate that had belonged to the deceased husband. All parties had proceeded, as far as to the present appeal, on the view that the surviving widow had the widow's estate only. But an order made in the course of the settlement operations in 1893 had conferred the estate of the deceased on the three widows as well as on his mother, in equal shares of one-fourth each. Held, that there was nothing in this order to show an intention to give to the mother and widows anything more than an interest, such as that which a Hindu widow takes; and that the inheritance would devolve in due course of law, an alienation which the widow had made operating only for her lifetime. *MUNNALAL CHAUDRI v. 76. — Mortgage Bond—

— Undue influence—Decree on mortgage bonds in the form provided by ss. 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882)—Stipulations in bonds amount to penalties—Compound interest—Increased interest on default—Compensation for breach of contract—Interest after date fixed for payment, power to give—Interest at contract rate after such date. Compound interest at a rate exceeding the rate of interest on the principal money, being in excess of and outside the ordinary and usual stipulation, may be regarded as in the nature of a penalty. Where a stipulation in a mortgage bond for increased interest on default is retrospective, and the increased interest runs from the date of the bond, and not merely from the date of the default, it is always to be construed as a penalty, because an additional money payment becomes in that case immediately payable by the mortgagor. But the increased interest is not therefore to be disallowed altogether, for by s. 74 of the Contract Act reasonable compensation not exceeding the amount of the penalty is to be received by the party complaining of the breach of the contract. Where two mortgage bonds were executed each providing for interest, compound interest, and on default increased interest from the respective dates of the execution of the bonds, and on the date of the execution of the second bond the amount due on the first bond with interest was included in the principal of the second bond; the High Court in a decree on the bonds held that the increased interest by way of compensation on the first bond should run only from the date of execution of the second bond, and that on the second bond should run only from the date of default on that bond, and allowed compound interest at the same rate only as that at which simple interest was stipulated for in the bond, and the Judicial Committee affirmed that decree. Heli, also, that the decree of the High Court which was in the form provided by ss. 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act (IV of 1882) was right in allowing interest after the time fixed for payment, until realization, at the Court rate of interest and not at the mortgage rate. The scheme and intention of the Transfer of Property Act was that a general account should be taken once for all, and an aggregate amount be stated in the decree for principal, interest and costs due on a fixed day, and that after the expiration of that day, if the property should not be redeemed, the matter should pass from the domain of contract to that of judgment, and the rights of the mortgagee should thenceforth depend, not on the contents of the bond, but on the directions in the decree. Neither of the cases Rameswar Koer v. Mehdi Hossein Khan, L. R. 25 I. A. 179; 1 L. R. 26 Cal. 39; and Maharaja of Bharatpur v. Kenno Dei, L. R. 23 I. A. 35; 1 L. R. 23 All. 181, is an authority for the contention that interest at the mortgage rate can be given after the date fixed for payment, until realization. In the former case the question was not raised, and in the latter case, although interest after the fixed date was given, it was not at the mortgage rate, but at the Court rate of interest. Ss. 86 and 88 of the Transfer of Property Act contain no directions for interest beyond the date to be fixed by the Court up to which the account is directed to be taken; but it has long been the uniform practice of the Calcutta High Court to give such interest, and the power

77. — Maintenance, decree for—Arrears of maintenance—Prospective decree for contingent arrears. Where a decree gave a certain sum per mensem to the plaintiff, and declared that the decree-holder should realize that amount monthly from the judgment-debtor—Held, that the decree merely recognized and declared the decree-holder to be entitled to the certain monthly allowance, but did not authorize her in execution of the decree to claim and obtain any arrears that might at any time fall due. *JULEBIA CHITTA KOER v. 82. Decree for possession and mesne profits—Local enquiry. A decree declared the plaintiff entitled to the possession of land with waslat from a date named, directing "the amount thereof to be ascertained on local enquiry," and to bear interest from the date of its ascertainment until payment, without saying more. Held, that the decree-holder was entitled to waslat until the date of delivery of possession to him. Semle: It was not necessary for the judicial officer who made the enquiry to hold a Court on the spot. He then took out execution attached, sold, and himself purchased the property in question. The objector in the meantime appealed to the Privy Council, and, having obtained a decree reversing the declaratory decree, took out execution against the opposite party for costs and waslat. The opposite party objected, but the

85. Declaratory decree—Separate suit—Mesne profits, meaning of—Decree awarding mesne profits. In 1878 the plaintiff obtained a decree declaring that he was entitled to receive, every year, from the defendant 12 per cent. of the rents and profits of a certain inam village. The decree also awarded mesne profits from the date of the institution of the suit. In 1884 the plaintiff sought, in execution of this decree, to recover his share of the profits of the village for the years 1882-83 and 1883-84. Held, that the plaintiff could not proceed to enforce his rights under the decree by way of execution. His remedy was by a suit on the right established by the decree. The decree had merely declared the right of the plaintiff to a certain share of produce, and payment was ordered of mesne profits computed according to certain principles. Such an award was not an award of a periodical payment in eternum. The very word "mesne" implied a terminus ad quem as well as a quo, and, in the absence of a special order, the terminus was the date of the decree. VINAYAK AMBIT DESHPANDE v. ARAJI HAISTARAY I. L. R. 12 Bom. 416

86. Interpretation of decree awarding "future mesne profits"—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 211. A decree for possession of immovable property was passed by the District Judge of Mirzapur on the 12th of November 1887 in favour of a plaintiff declaring that "the plaintiff is also entitled to mesne profits." That decree was affirmed by an order of Her Majesty in Council, dated the 11th of May 1895, without variation in respect of the order as to mesne profits. Possession of the immovable property to which the decree related was obtained by the decree-holder on the 30th of November 1895. Held, that the decree of the Privy Council was to be construed as a decree awarding mesne profits up to the date when possession was obtained and from the date of the institution of the suit. FAKHARUDDIN MAHOMED ASHAN v. OFFICIAL TRUSTEE OF BENGAL, I. L. R. 8 Cal. 178 L. R. 8 I. A. 197, and Paranj Chand v. Roy Radha Kishen, I. L. R. 19 Cal. 132, referred to. BHAJI BAHADUR SINGH v. Upon second appeal on the 30th January 1891, it was "ordered and decreed with consent of the parties that the defendants be allowed one month's time to redeem," and in other respects the appeal was dismissed. Where there is no ambiguity in a decree, the duty of the executing Court is to carry the orders of the decree into effect, as being conclusive between the parties, whether it may or may not be disputable in point of law. It is competent for a Court passing a mortgage decree to give interest beyond the date fixed for payment and up to the date of realisation. After a review of its judgment, the High Court decreed that the plaintiff should hold possession of the one-third share, subject however, as owner thereof, to the payment of a proportionate share of the debts of the deceased person. Held, that the plaintiff was not deprived of the possession which had been adjudged to him by the original decree by non-fulfilment of the terms of the decree passed on review of judgment. ALI HOSSEIN KHAN v. books and other documents relating to the management of the village. The defendants refused. Thereupon the plaintiffs presented a dakhast in execution, praying (inter alia) for the delivery of those books and documents. The Subordinate Judge rejected this application on the ground that it was beyond the terms of the decree. Held, on appeal to the High Court, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the possession of the account books and documents in question, as being essential to the proper and effectual enjoyment and management of the village awarded by the decree. Such books and documents were properly to be regarded as accessory to the estate and as claimable by those to whom it had been awarded. Court in cross second-appeals without writing a judgment. There was no point taken in either of the appeals as to costs. The plaintiff subsequently applied to the High Court for the amendment of the decree under s. 206 of the Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882). It was contended for the defendant that the application should have been made to the lower Appeal Court. Held, that the only decree which existed for the purposes of execution after the High Court confirmed the decree of the Court below was the decree of the High Court into which that of the lower Court became incorporated. The application was, therefore, properly made to the High Court. Held, further, that, that being so and there having been no appeal by either party against the order as to costs, the Court might properly look at the judgment of the Court below with a view to making the decree as to costs agree with it. SHIVLAL KALIDAS v. 17. — Finding in judgment not embodied in decree—Amendment of decree—Appeal against amendment decree—Time how calculated. In a suit for a declaration of title to land and for possession, which was based upon a will alleged to have been made in plaintiff's favour, the Subordinate Judge, finding the document to be a forgery, dismissed the suit. The fourth defendant had been made a party, inasmuch as he claimed a portion of the land as alienee. Though the case for the plaintiff failed, the Subordinate Judge, on the above finding, dealt in his judgment with an issue which had been framed regarding the validity or otherwise of the alleged alienation to the fourth defendant. He held that it had been made for no consideration, and found the issue against the fourth defendant. The decree dismissing the suit, which bore date the 22nd of June 1896, contained no reference to the finding against the fourth defendant on that issue. The fourth defendant applied for a review of the judgment, complaining that, as the suit had been dismissed, the reference in the judgment to the alleged alienation in his favour was unnecessary, and might, if permitted to stand, operate against him as res judicata in any subsequent suit that might be brought, and praying that the finding might be either expunged or modified in his favour. Upon this being refused, fourth defendant applied, under s. 206 of the Code of Civil Procedure, that the decree might be brought into conformity with the judgment, and an order was made on 27th October 1896, adding to the decree a clause to the encroachment, and pleaded that if it should be proved they were willing to pay increased rent. They also admitted liability in respect of the arrears of rent. The encroachment was proved, and the District Munsif gave judgment declaring defendants liable for increased rent in proportion, a decree being drawn up in similar terms. Both judgment and decree omitted to award the amount admittedly due as arrears of rent. Plaintiff thereupon presented a petition to the District Munsif, who ordered the decree to be amended so as to render defendants liable for the said arrears. This order was passed more than one month from the date of the decree. Upon a petition being preferred by defendants in the High Court against the District Munsif's order of amendment: Held, that the petition was not admissible, inasmuch as it was open to the petitioner, under s. 5 of the Limitation Act, to appeal against the decree as amended, notwithstanding that a month had expired from the date of the decree. NANDA RAI v. 5. — Effect of a decree obtained by an attaching creditor in a suit against successful intervenors or claimants—Civil Procedure Code (Act VIII of 1859), ss 240, 270, 271. In 1872 the plaintiff obtained a money-decree against two brothers, P and K. In execution of that decree, he attached their one-half share in certain fields in 1874. The attachment was removed at the instance of two claimants, S and B. In 1875 the plaintiff sued the claimants and obtained a decree in his favour in 1878. Meanwhile, in December 1874, after the plaintiff's attachment had been removed, one P obtained a decree against one of the brothers, P. In 1867, while the plaintiff's suit against S and B was pending, P's right, title and interest in the one-half share of the fields belonging to himself and K was sold in execution of P's decree and purchased by the defendant. In 1881 the plaintiff again attached the one-half share belonging to the two brothers under his decree of 1872. Thereupon the defendant, relying on his purchase of 1876, applied for the removal of the attachment. It was removed from P's one-fourth share and maintained on K's share, which was in due course sold. The plaintiff now sued to establish his right to sell P's one-fourth share under his decree of 1872. Held, also, that, though the effect of the decree obtained by the plaintiff in his suit against the claimants, S and B, was to efface entirely their obstruction to his attachment of 1874, to reinstate that attachment as in full force ab initio, and to restore the state of things that had been disturbed by the order of release, yet the plaintiff could not succeed in the present suit, as the sale to defendant was valid, & that the plaintiff taking debtor BEHARI I. The attestation required by s. 59 of the Transfer of Property Act is an attestation by witnesses of the execution of the document, and not of the admission of execution. If in any way by sale, etc., the said mouzah shall cease to be my property, I agree to set apart, upon partition and division for A and B, as much land as may yield Rs600 in another of the mouzahs owned by me exclusively, and to that also the same conditions as above shall be applicable." A applied to have his name registered as owner of a share in the mouzah sufficient to yield an income of Rs300 per annum. Held, that, under the ikararnamah, A had only a rent charge on the property. should have arisen from a mistake, his only remedy was a suit for reforming the deed so as to make it in accord with the actual agreement between the parties at the time of the sale. VOL. II.

The practice, adopted by patwaris in some parts of the North-Western Provinces, of applying the term "fasli year" to the "agricultural year" as defined in Act XIX of 1873, s. 3, cl. 8, is erroneous. Where parties to a deed describe a date as being in such and such a "fasli" year, they must be taken, in absence of evidence of mutual mistake, to refer to the calendar fasli year. In interpreting a document, a clause which is inconsistent in any construction thereof with the remaining provisions of the document must be rejected. YAD RAM v. AMIR SINGH, W. N. ALL. In cases decided on the construction of documents, in which the expressions mokurari istemrari, istemrari mokurari, have been considered upon the question whether an absolute interest has been conferred by such documents, or not, it has been taken for certain that, if the words "naslan bad naslan" had been added, an absolute interest would have been clearly conferred. Accordingly, in construing a razinama between parties dividing family estate and expressly declaring that the shares should descend "naslan bad naslan"—Held, that the insertion of these words was conclusive in itself; the expressed object of this razinama pointing to the same construction, viz., that the estate taken under it was absolute. The words used were—“Hath *** nawasi apne ki bar katali karke zar-i-saman tamam vo kaimal wasul pakar laksh diya aur hiba kardiya.” The deed was stamped as a sale-deed and was duly registered, but no possession was given under it, and there was apparently no evidence external

23. ——— Deeds releasing future and contingent interests—Agreement excluding a possible question between the parties as to the effect of words in a will, under which they took their rights. Three brothers, under their father's will, were entitled, each on attaining full age, to the testator's residuary estate in equal shares. When all had attained full age, two having been minors at the testator's death, they effected a separation of their interests derived from the will, and executed to one another instruments of compromise and partition containing words relating to possible claims which they gave up. One of the two younger brothers afterwards died, having taken, under the will of the other younger one, all the estate of the latter who had died without issue before him. The eldest then attempted to raise the question whether, on the one hand, the brothers had taken under their father's will absolute interests, or on the other, interests that were divested, and went over to a surviving brother in the event of death

24. ——— Title under a will followed by a family arrangement adding to the property devised. The will of a proprietor, who died in 1861, disposed of a zamindari, and of one village within it, as two distinct properties, giving the zamindari to the testator's two widows, and, on the other hand, giving the village in equal shares, in perpetuity, to the two brothers of his junior wife. Neither of the two brothers took possession of their respective moieties on the testator's death, and the whole village was treated for some time as part of the zamindari, the profits of it being received by, or on behalf of, the widows. In 1869 one of the brothers died leaving a son, who succeeded satisfaction in lieu of his moiety. The junior widow having died, the senior got possession of the village, alleging that the surviving brother had merely been appointed to act as manager of it on behalf of herself and her co-widow. Held, that under the will the claimant had been originally entitled to one-half of the village including its rents, from the testator's death; and that to this half had been added the other, with title, in 1869, in pursuance of the transaction in regard to it. An order given by the widows in that year making over the village was not a revocable one; and the interest in the additional half conferred upon the claimant was commensurate with what was already his own. No writing was then necessary to vest the other half in him. Such a transaction was

The deed provided that, in case any beneficiary became insolvent, "or do or suffer anything whereby his share or any part thereof would through his act or of the family of such persons. In July 1894, the plaintiff, who was one of the sons of the settlor, filed his petition in insolvency; but on the 5th December 1894, he withdrew it. Held, that the forfeiture clause did not take effect, and that the plaintiff was entitled to be paid by the trustees his share of the income of the trust property. *HOSURJI NOWROJI DAVUR v. 26. ——— Sale-deed with counter-deed undertaking to re-transfer land in event of payments being made. In a document described as a sale-deed, plaintiff's father professed to give, "in absolute sale," certain lands to the defendant, inasmuch as he was unable to pay a debt owing by him to the defendant. On the same day defendant executed a counter-deed in which he referred to the said sale-deed and undertook to get the said lands transferred to plaintiff's father in the event of the latter paying the said debt within a certain time, together with interest till date of payment; and in that event to cancel the said sale-deed and deliver the same to plaintiff's father. The counter-deed further provided the plaintiff's father should pay the principal and interest of the said debt by instalments, and that, in default of payment of any instalment, to the sale-deed, after getting the counter-deed cancelled. Held, that on their true construction the documents showed nothing more than an intention to secure repayment of the debt; that though the provisions for payment by instalments and of the whole amount in default of instalments were contained in the counter-deed signed only by the transferee of the land, they were equivalent to a covenant by the transferor so to repay, because the two documents being parts of one transaction, both parties were bound by or could take advantage of every stipulation, whether contained in one or other of the deeds, as would have been the case if the transaction had been embodied in a single document. Held, therefore, that the transferee had a right to recover the debt (with interest) from the transferor personally; and that the provision entitling the transferee to credit the loan to himself in default of payment could not be construed as negating that right. Two documents relating to the transfer and re-transfer of land which were so connected as to constitute one transaction having been executed in the year 1882, prior to the passing of the Transfer of Property Act:—Held, that transaction should be regarded as having been entered into with reference to the law as propounded in the course of Malbar decisions commencing in 1858 and referred to in Thimbasamy Madelly v. Hosain Routhen, L. R. 21 A. 241. I. L. R. 21 Mad 1, and that the documents must be construed accordingly. RAMAYYA v. KRISHNAMMA. I. L. R. 23 Mad. 114

This re-admission was not approved of by the accused, who formed a faction of the caste; and they after an interval of six months distributed in the bazar to all classes of the public printed papers in which the complainant was described as a doshi or sinner, which signified that he was a person unfit to be associated with. The accused were charged with the offence of defamation. They pleaded privilege, and it was admitted that they had acted without malice. Held, that the accused had not acted in good faith, and that the publication was not under the circumstances privileged and protected by Penal Code, s. 499, excep. 10, and that the accused were accordingly guilty of defamation. THIRAGARAYA v. He received anonymous letters imputing bad conduct to the plaintiff. He was requested to call a caste meeting to consider the matter; he did so, and placed the letters before the meeting, and it was then resolved to warn the plaintiff. The warning was, however, unheeded. So a second meeting was called by the defendant. Plaintiff sent her brother and sister's husband to the meeting in order that they might defend her. But they offered no explanation on her behalf. Witnesses were then heard and ten persons selected to decide what should be done. Defendant was one of those ten, and he communicated to the general meeting the decision they had come to, namely, that the plaintiff should be excommunicated. The meeting unanimously adopted this decision, and the defendant announced the decision of the caste to the gor for him to promulgate. The plaintiff thereupon sued to recover from the defendant Rs. 249 as damages for defamation. Held, that the defendant was not guilty of defamation. He acted in the matter honestly, and as he was bound to act in the interest of the caste, and in discharge of his duties as leader of the caste. Per RANADE, J.—The defendant's act was privileged. Defendant was the head of the caste, and the caste men assembled were interested in the matter along with the defendant. Anonymous letters were received and the defendant had a duty to perform. The matter was discussed at a properly convened meeting, where the plaintiff's near relations were duly summoned and were in fact present. The occasion was lawful and properly

It was admitted by K that B had no enmity towards him or his wife, and that it was the custom of the guru to settle such matters as those that had arisen in connection with his wife, and it was proved that the letter was issued after B had made an inquiry into the truth of the allegation. The lower Court convicted. Held, that the conviction was wrong, it being clear that the statements contained in the letter had been made in good faith for the protection

If the person so treated was in a position entitling him to demand submission, and to make non-submission an offence, then that position would render the communication privileged; and if not, then the mere statement that the complainant did not obey one, whom he was not bound to obey, was not a defamatory imputation. ANONYMOUS. 6 Mad. It is not necessary that such impropriety of feeling should in all cases be established by evidence extrinsic to the comment which is the subject of the complaint. For whether fair comment is to be regarded as falling under a branch of the law of privilege or not, it cannot excuse an injury arising, not from the mere act of criticism but from a state of mind in the critic which is in itself unjustifiable and the excuse may be so forfeited either by reason of an evil intent in him, or by reason of mere recklessness in making an unwarrantable assertion. For then the comment would not be fair comment at all. Apart from extrinsic evidence of malice, protection must be withheld even from what purports to be criticism, if it states as a fact to be inferred from the book criticised an imputation for which the book itself contains absolutely no foundation whatever. The right of fair comment involves two essentials, first that the imputation should be comment on the work criticised, and second that it should be "fair"— libility but due care and attention. But how far erroneous actions or statements are to be imputed be expected that the honest conclusions of a calm and philosophical mind may differ very largely from the honest conclusions of a person excited by sectarian zeal and untrained to habits of precise reasoning. At the same time it must be borne in mind that good faith in the formation or expression of an opinion, can afford no protection to an imputation which does not purport to be based on that which is the legitimate subject of public comment. The object of Exception 6 to s. 499 of the Indian Penal Code (Act XLV of 1860) is that the public should be aided by comment in its judgment of the public performance submitted to its judgment. Comment otherwise defamatory is justified on this made by a critic without reference, express or implied, to the work under criticism, if in terms so general as to be capable of conveying an unfavourable impression of him apart from what appears in his work, cannot be justified by the critic on the ground that his intention was to base his imputation solely on the work reviewed, and that he had in his mind passages therein supporting the imputation. The responsibility of the critic is to be gauged by the effect which his comment is calculated to produce, and not by what he says was his intention. It is not enough that he should intend to form his opinion on the work before him: he is also bound in the words of the exceptions to express his opinion with due care and caution, and to give the public no ground for supposing that he is speaking of anything but the performance submitted to its judgment. *EMPEROR v. A pleader acting upon his own recollection of the evidence given by a witness two years before, in another case in which he was a pleader, but drawing a wrong inference therefrom that the witness had been disbelieved by a particular Court, and had admitted to having been so disbelieved, and putting questions to him conveying such an imputation, after being warned that his impression was wrong, cannot, in the absence of actual malice, be convicted of defamation. A pleader, especially in the mofussil, where instructions are very commonly inaccurate and misleading, is as much justified in acting on his own recollection as on specific instructions, and the fact that he has drawn a wrong inference does not, in the absence of actual malice, deprive him of the protection of the ninth exception to s. 499 of the Penal Code. When a pleader is charged with defamation, in respect of words spoken or written, while performing his duty as a pleader, the Court ought to presume good faith and not hold him criminally liable, unless there is satisfactory evidence of actual malice and unless there is cogent proof that unfair advantage was taken of his position as a pleader for an indirect purpose. In re Nagarj Trikamji, I. — Privilege.—An accused person is privileged in respect of questions put in good faith for the purpose of defending himself.—Publication. The rule of English Law "that no action of libel or slander lies whether against Judge, counsel, witnesses, or parties for words written or spoken in the ordinary course of any proceeding before any Court, or Tribunal, recognised by law," will also apply to an accused person in respect of questions put by him in good faith for the purpose of defending himself. A party receiving a notice is entitled to reply to the notice and state his reasons, and such reply is privileged so long as it is confined to the matter in hand and is relevant, provided the reply is not published by the person making it. Where such reply is a mere acknowledgment that the party had made the imputations complained of in the notice, relief can be claimed only in respect of the original imputations. *PACHAIPERENAL CHETTIAR v. In the meanwhile the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Act XVII of 1879) having been made applicable to the district, the mortgagor applied to the Court for payment by instalments under s. 15 (b) of the Act. The application for payment by instalments having been made within one month from the time the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (Act XVII of 1879) was made applicable, no question of limitation arose. *Per Russell, Acting C. But that is not so when a decree for sale is made absolute. The amount for which the decree was passed is still payable, and though, strictly speaking, it may not be payable by the "mortgagor," it is payable out of what, but for the decree absolute, would be still his property. MANCHERJI THAKORDAS (1906) . In 1891 the plaintiff (widow and heir of the mortgagor R) brought this suit to redeem the mortgage and to recover possession of the land, contending that, under s. 22 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1872), the sale of the equity of redemption was a nullity. The lower Court dismissed the suit, holding that, although the sale might be illegal, so long as the certificate of sale remained in force, it was a bar to the plaintiff's right to redeem. Held, that, the plaintiff being found to be an agriculturist, the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Acts (XVII of 1879 and XXII of 1882) applied. The provisions of those Acts applied, although the decree and order for sale under which the sale took place were made before the Acts were passed. The Act expressly forbids the immovable property of an agriculturist to be sold in execution, and an equity of redemption is immovable property within the contemplation of the Act. The sale, therefore, on the 10th February 1883, of the equity of redemption in the mortgaged lands was illegal and a nullity, and was no defence to the plaintiff's suit to redeem the mortgage. MANALAVU V. ss. 46, 47—Conciliator's certificate obtained in the name of one co-parcener—Suit on behalf of the family—The remaining co-parceners joining as plaintiffs to the suit—Hindu Law—Manager—Powers to represent the family. In a suit brought on behalf of a joint Hindu family the conciliator's certificate required by s. 46 of the Dekkhan Agriculturists' Relief Act (XVII of 1879) was obtained in the name of one of the co-parceners alone; but all the co-parceners joined as plaintiffs and admitted in the plaint that the certificate had been obtained on behalf of the joint family. It was objected to this suit that as the certificate was in the name of one of the plaintiffs the suit could not lie. Held, overruling the objection, that the certificate obtained by one of the co-parceners, who was either the managing member of the family at the time the certificate was obtained or who, though not manager, obtained it with the consent and on behalf of the joint family, acting as its agent, was sufficient to support the suit. The rule of Hindu law is that a joint family is represented in all transactions or concerns with the outside world by its Karta (manager), provided these are for the benefit or necessity of the family; and that any co-parcener who does not occupy that position of manager can represent and bind the family in such transaction or concerns, provided he was either previously authorised to represent it or, in the absence of such authority, the other co-parcener subsequently by words or conduct ratified his acts. L & Co. sold the cotton to D, and D again sold it back to the defendants at R101 per candy. The defendants then sold it to H, by whom it was sold to K, and K finally sold it to B & Co. at R191 per candy. B & Co. obtained possession of the cotton from the plaintiff on or about the 24th April on payment of R101 per candy, for which they had contracted to buy it from K. The delivery order for the cotton had been sent on the 20th April by the plaintiff to the defendants, who, upon receipt ——— wrote ———

The delivery order was then endorsed by the defendants to their vendees (L & Co.), who in turn endorsed it to D, by whom it was endorsed to the defendants. By subsequent endorsements it came ultimately to B & Co., who, as above mentioned, got delivery of the cotton from the plaintiff on payment of R191 per candy. The plaintiff, who had sold to the defendants at R200 per candy and who received from B & Co. only R191 per candy, sued the defendants in the Small Cause Court for the difference. The defendants contended that after the receipt of the letter written by them to the plaintiff he was bound not to deliver the cotton to L & Co., or to any subsequent endorsee of the delivery order, until he had obtained payment of the full price (R200 per candy) which the defendants had agreed to pay him for it; that the delivery to B & Co. was not a delivery authorized by the defendants; that the payment made by B & Co. to the plaintiff was not a payment made by, or on behalf of, the defendants; that the plaintiff's cause of action, if any, against the defendants was for the full price of the cotton; and that, as that exceeded R2,000, the Small Cause Court had no jurisdiction. Held, that the defendant's letter to the plaintiff was ineffectual to control or alter the course of the delivery order, and that the plaintiff was bound to deliver the cotton to B & Co. on payment by them of the price of R191 per candy. The defendants, having re-purchased the cotton after it had passed through several hands, sold it for R191 per candy to H, from whom it ultimately passed to B & Co. The plaintiff's lien, therefore, as regarded H and his sub-vendees, was confined to the price at the above rate, and B & Co. were entitled to the goods as against the defendants on payment of that price. The defendants' letter, therefore, of the 20th April 1883—however the plaintiff might have been bound to act on it as regarded L & Co., to whom the cotton was sold at R202 per candy, and the other sub-vendees prior to the re-purchase by the defendants—could only, as regards subsequent purchasers, prevent delivery to them before payment of the price at which the defendants had re-sold the goods, viz., R191 per candy. That price was actually paid to the plaintiff before he did deliver the goods, and credit was given to the defendants in the account. 1. Equitable mortgage—Security—Lien. The firm of C N & Co., Calcutta, had an account with a Bank of which R was manager, under an arrangement that the bank should discount bills accepted by C N & Co. to a certain amount, and that C N & Co. should keep in the Bank a certain fund as security for the bills.

unless security were given for the amount then due to the Bank. A, the only partner in the firm of C N & Co., then in Calcutta, verbally promised on 24th November to deposit with the Bank the title-deeds of the premises in which C N & Co. carried on their business; and in consideration of such promise, R discounted further bills from 24th to 29th November. A sent to R a letter on 25th November as follows: "In pursuance of the conversation the writer had with you yesterday, we now deposit the title-deeds of landed house property, as security against our discount account." The letter en-

1870, suspended payment and by the usual order their estate and effects vested in the Official Assignee, who thereupon, finding that the Bank claimed a lien on the deeds, brought a suit against the Bank for recovery of them. Held, that the Bank was entitled to retain the deeds as security both for the balance of the discount account existing at the time of the promise to deposit, and also for the bills discounted between the 24th and 29th November. Scoble: The Bank was entitled to hold the deeds actually deposited as if they were the deeds which formed the subject of the verbal promise to *R. On the evening of the same day, the defendant, by way of further security, gave to the plaintiff a promissory note for the amount of the loan, and enclosed thereto the following memorandum:

4. Return of deeds to satisfy debts as to title. Where the plaintiff had advanced to the first defendant Rs. 38,000, and had agreed to advance Rs. 27,000 more, the whole Rs. 65,000 to be secured by a mortgage of the first defendant's immovable property, and the first defendant had deposited with the plaintiff the title-deeds of his immovable property, for the purpose of enabling him to get a mortgage-deed prepared, and had agreed to execute such mortgage-deed on payment to him by the plaintiff of the balance of the Rs. 65,000, and the title-deeds were afterwards returned by the plaintiff to the first defendant for the purpose of enabling him to clear up certain doubts as to his title to some of the premises comprised in the deeds, and such deeds were not subsequently returned by the first defendant, nor were others deposited in lieu thereof, and the balance of the Rs. 65,000 was not paid by the plaintiff to the first defendant: Held, that there was an equitable mortgage to the plaintiff to secure Rs. 38,000, so far as concerned the property comprised in the deeds.

5. Contract of mortgage—Letter stating terms of equitable mortgage, effect of—Equitable mortgagee, his proper remedy A and B executed a joint and several promissory note in favour of the plaintiff. On the same day A deposited with the plaintiff the title-deeds of his property as collateral security, and received conjointly with B a part of the consideration-money for the promissory note. Shortly afterwards A advanced a letter to the plaintiff to this effect: "As collateral security for the due payment of Rs. 10,000 (sic) by a promissory note of even date I enclose herewith the title-deeds of my property

Moussa Hroon Oo*

I. L. R. 13 Calc. 322

6. Legal mortgage unregistered—Claim by mortgagee, who has failed to register mortgage-deed, to have an equitable mortgage by virtue of deposit of title-deeds previously to execution of mortgage-deed. The plaintiff having consented to lend Rs. 10,000 to the defendant, the latter deposited with him, on the 2nd April 1883, the title-deeds of a certain property. On receiving them, the plaintiff told the defendant that he would take them to his attorney, have a deed drawn by attorney, and the deed had been prepared. At the time the deeds were handed over to the plaintiff (i. e., the 2nd April 1883), there was no existing debt due by the defendant to the plaintiff. On the 6th April 1883, the mortgage-deed was executed, and on the same day the money was advanced by the plaintiff to the defendant. The plaintiff stated that he "had advanced the money on the security of the title-deeds on the same day." He did not say how long before the execution of the deed the money had been paid, but the deed itself recited that the Rs. 10,000 were paid immediately before the execution of the mortgage. The mortgage-deed was not registered. The plaintiff stated that he knew that it required registration, but that it was left unregistered at the request of the defendant, who did not wish to be "exposed in the eyes of the public." The plaintiff sued for a declaration that he was entitled to an equitable mortgage upon the said property, and for the sale thereof, in default of the payment of the mortgage-debt. He contended that the loan had been made on the security of the title-deeds which had been deposited on the 2nd April; that he had, no doubt, intended to obtain a legal mortgage, but that he had abandoned that intention by consenting to leave the mortgage-deed unregistered, and had on the 6th April elected to rely upon his equitable mortgage. Held, that the plaintiff had no equitable mortgage. At the time when the deeds were deposited, there was no antecedent or existing debt, nor was any oral agreement made that the title deeds should stand as a security for future advances, nor was any advance, in fact, made until the mortgage-deed was about to be executed. There could be no doubt that, if the defendant had not been ready to execute the deed, no advance would have been made. The money was really advanced on

7. ———— Lien—Mahomedan law—Trust. S purchased the muttah of E, and paid part of the consideration-money, when the parties came to complete, the vendors had not the title-deeds, but they promised to deliver them in a few days, and arranged that the remaining part of the purchase-money should be retained by the purchaser, and they handed over to him the title-deeds of another muttah called T, to be held as security for their delivering to the purchaser the title-deeds of muttah E in order to perfect his title. The pur-created a lien, and bound the muttah T for the advances made by S. Semle: By the Mahomedan law such a deposit for a security in respect of a contingent loss would be in the nature of a trust, not a power. VARDEN SETH SAM v. LUCKPATHY ROYJEE LALLAH. 9 Moo. I. A. 303

8. ———— Payment of mortgage-debt by third person at request of mortgagor—Deposit of mortgage-deed and documents of title with such third person at request of mortgagor—Effect of transaction—Equitable mortgage—Right of suit. The first defendant held a mortgage as a security for a loan of Rs 350. On the 23rd June 1893, the mortgagors themselves paid him the day, paid was d so endorsed, together with another document of title, was thereupon handed over to the plaintiff by direction of the mortgagors. The plaintiff subsemortgage from the defendant. But held, also, dismissing the appeal, that the plaintiff had no right of suit against the defendant. The defendant's mortgage was at an end. It was paid off, and nothing remained for the defendant to do but to retransfer the property to the mortgagors.

What rights that deposit gave against the mortgagors depended on the agreement between them. KHUSHAL SADASHIV v. PENAMCHAND JESURJI

 further sum to the defendants who agreed that the plaintiff should retain the title-deeds already held by him as security for the repayment of the further

The pleader declined to proceed with the suit and the plaintiff, who was present in Court, took no steps. Thereupon the suit was dismissed in these words: "The plaintiff's pleader said that he was not willing to proceed. So the suit was dismissed." The plaintiff subsequently applied for restoration under ss. 103 and 157 and the suit was restored to the file; Held, that the dismissal of the suit under the above circumstances was a dismissal for default under s. 102, and that the order restoring the suit was rightly passed. A plaintiff 'fails to appear' within the meaning of s. 102, when his pleader declines to proceed with the suit and it makes no difference that the party himself was present in Court. Held, also, that, under the circumstances, the order of restoration should not have been interfered with on revision. and Rai Balkrishna v. Masuma Bibi, L. R. 9 I. A. 182; I. L. R. 5 All. 142, referred to. The defendant, a "disqualified proprietor," whose property on the ground of his indebtedness and consequent inability to manage it, had been placed in charge of the Court of Wards, executed in favour of the plaintiff a bond for Rs. 10,000 repayable in seven years on the condition of half-yearly payments of interest at 18 per cent. per annum, and compound interest in default of payment of instalments. The bond was one renewing the former bond in similar terms, on which Rs. 750 was due, with an additional loan of Rs. 1,250. Nothing having been paid in respect of the bond, when it fell due, which was after the defendant's estate was released from the charge of the Court of Wards, the plaintiff sued for the full amount of principal and Rs. 1,999 for interest and compound interest due on the bond. Held, by the Judicial Committee, that under the circumstances of the case, the plaintiff had been at that time, of the Court of Wards.

Both Courts below concurred in finding that simple interest at 18 per cent. per annum would not have been a high rate, but that the charging of compound interest was exorbitant and unconscionable, and accepting these findings, though not strictly findings of fact, the Judicial Committee held, that the plaintiff used his position to demand and obtain from the defendants more onerous terms than were reasonable, and that the bond should be set aside. In the particular circumstances of the case, interest at 18 per cent. per annum was allowed on the sums advanced by the plaintiff throughout. DIKSHITAR DAS v. MANEN. HIR BAKSH SINGH (1906). I. L. The Assistant Judge dismissed the appeal for default of the appellant's (defendant's) appearance on the day fixed for hearing. The Assistant Judge had jurisdiction, under s. 358 of the Code, to entertain the application for re-admission, and his order refusing to re-admit was not subject to reversal or review by the District Judge. At the time when the application was made, the minor was at Lahore. Held, that, under ss. 1 and 4 of Act IX of 1861, read with s. 17 of the Civil Procedure Code, the application was cognizable by the District Judge of Allahabad, where the cause of action arose; and that, even apart from s. 17 of the Code, the minor

21. — Applicability to guardians who had ceased to be such before the Act came into force—Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890), ss. 41 and 51. The Guardians and Wards Act (VIII of 1890) does not apply to guardians whose powers had ceased by reason of their wards having attained majority, or otherwise, prior to the passing of the Act. The word "guardian" in s. 51 of the Act means a guardian who was such at the time the Act came into force. A was appointed a guardian of B's property under the Bombay Minors Act, XX of 1861. B attained majority in 1836. In 1892 B applied to the District Judge for an order directing A to deliver to B his property, together with the accounts relating thereto. The District Judge made the order, as asked for, under s. 41, cl. 3, of Act VIII of 1890. Held, that the District Judge had no jurisdiction under Act VIII of 1890 to make the order in question, as A had ceased to be a guardian before the Act came into force. VALLABH HIRVAND v. (a) Bearing in mind that s. 589 of the Code of Civil Procedure was passed to regulate the appellate jurisdiction in appeals from orders, the words "Court subordinate to that Court" in s. 3 of Act X of 1888 must be construed with reference to its appellate jurisdiction. Consequently a District Court has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal from an order in insolvency matters, in a case where it has no jurisdiction to hear an appeal in the suit itself, as when the subject-matter of the suit is more than Rs. 5,000 in value. VENKATRAYAR v JANABO ALIYAN. The defendant appealed against this decree, and the Appellate Court, being of opinion that the suit was not of a nature cognizable by a Court of Small Causes, reversed the decree and remanded the case to the Subordinate Judge for trial under his ordinary jurisdiction. Thereupon the Subordinate Judge made a reference to the High Court under s. 646A of the Code of Civil Procedure (Act XIV of 1882). Held, that the reference was not authorized by the provisions of s. 646A of the Code, as it applied to a case before judgment. The High Court could, however, deal with the matter under s. 622 of the Code. Held, also, that, the suit having been tried by the Subordinate Judge in the exercise of his jurisdiction as a Judge of a Court of Small Causes, the decree was final, and not appealable to the District Court, and the District Judge had no jurisdiction to hear the appeal. The only remedy open to the aggrieved party was to apply to the High

An appeal was then preferred to and was heard by the District Court, though the Judge who heard the appeal was not the Judge who had settled the issues. On a second appeal being preferred to the High Court. Held, (i) that the District Court had jurisdiction to hear the appeal, s. 17 of the Madras Civil Courts Act (III of 1873) having no application, (ii) that the High Court had jurisdiction, under ss. 25 and 191 (2) of the Code of Civil Procedure, to make the transfer to the Subordinate Judge, although the case was in part heard. *PARANISAMI COWNDAN v. The appeal was heard by a Division Bench, and the Judges differing, the appeal was decreed in accordance with the opinion of the Senior Judge. From this judgment an appeal was preferred under s. 15 of the Letters Patent. After the opinion of the Division Bench was pronounced, A applied to the Judge before whom he had made it for the return of his security bond, but his application was refused pending the final decree of the High Court in the matter. A then moved the High Court for the cancellation or return of the bond. Held, that there was no necessity that this motion should have been presented to the Judges who heard the appeal, for it related to matter beside the judgment, and a Division Bench may receive motions from all districts, without reference to the Bench which pronounced the judgment.

The Division Bench before whom that reference came declined to interfere with the order. It was held by another Division Bench before whom the matter was subsequently brought on motion that they were not debarred from entering into the question of the want of jurisdiction, and, as the effect of the Assistant Magistrate's order was to prejudice one of the parties, the order, which was admittedly without jurisdiction, was set aside. *RUK BHADUR SINGH v. 1. ——— Mahomedan Law—Hanafi Sunnis—Talak-ul-bain by one pronouncement in the absence of the wife—Execution of talaknama in the presence of the Kazi—Communication of the divorce to the wife—Marz-ul-maut—Death of the husband before expiration of the period of iddat A, a Mahomedan belonging to the Hanafi Sunnis sect, took with him two witnesses and went to the Kazi and there pronounced but once the divorce of his wife (plaintiff) in her absence. He had a talaknama written out by the Kazi, which was signed by him and attested by the witnesses. A then took steps to communicate the divorce and make over the iddat money to the plaintiff, but she evaded both. A died soon after this. The plaintiff thereupon filed a suit alleging that she was still the wife of A and claimed maintenance and residence. Held, overruling the contention that the divorce should have been pronounced three times, that the talak-ul-iddat (i.e., irregular divorce) is good in law, though bad in theology. Held, further, in answer to the contention that the divorce was not final as it was never communicated to the plaintiff, that a bain-lahai, such as the present, reduced to manifest and customary writing, took effect immediately on the mere writing. The divorce being absolute, it is effected as soon as the words are written "even without the wife receiving the writing." In order to establish Marz-ul-maut there must be present at least three conditions:—(1) Proximate danger of death, so that there is, as it is phrased, a preponderance (gholaba) of life or apprehension, that is that at the given time death must be more probable than life. (ii) there must be some degree of subjective apprehension of death in the mind of the sick person; (iii) there must be some external indicia, chief among which would be the inability to attend to ordinary avocations. Where an irrevocable divorce has been pronounced by a Mahomedan husband in health, and the husband dies during the period of the divorced wife's iddat, she has no claim to inherit to the husband. *SARIBAI v. This agreement, however, fell through, and the respondent filed her answer denying adultery, and making a counter-charge of adultery against the petitioner. The co-respondent did not defend the suit. At the trial, the plea taken by the respondent was that the petition should be dismissed on the ground of collusion between the petitioner and herself. Held, that inasmuch as the agreement, which contemplated a fraud upon the Court, was not acted on, and in no way affected the decision of the Court, it did not constitute collusion. *Churchward v. given by s. 3 of altering the limits of the jurisdiction by executive order does not exclude by implication the general legislative powers. To effect an alteration of such jurisdiction by Act instead of by Order is still within the general scope of the legislative powers of the Governor General in Council, although the more convenient course of an executive Government notification is usually followed. Previously to the institution of the present suit, the respondent had left India and gone to England without any intention of returning to India. It was contended that Act IV of 1869, passed by the Indian Legislature in exercise of its power to make laws for persons resident in Native territories, could not affect her. Held, that the petition satisfied the Act by alleging residence of the petitioner in India and the commission of the act of adultery whilst the parties last resided together in India. It was not necessary to show the residence of the respondent. THORNTON v. THORNTON

7. "Residence," meaning of the word—Jurisdiction of the Court to grant divorce. That under the Indian Divorce Act domicile is not the test of the Court's authority to grant a divorce, it being sufficient if the petitioner resides in India at the time of presenting the petition and professes the Christian religion. That the meaning of the word "reside" must in each case be decided with reference to its own circumstances. It conveys the idea, if not of permanence, of some degree of continuance. That the "residence" to which the Indian Divorce Act points must be some thing more than occupation during occasional and casual visits within the local limits of the Court, more especially where there is a residence outside those limits marked with a considerable measure of continuance. That where the petitioner does not reside in India, the Court has no jurisdiction by virtue of the Charter of 1774 and the Letters Patent of 1862 and 1865 to grant him a decree for divorce. *JOHNDRA NATH BANERJEE v. Application of Act—Conversion to Christianity—Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act (XXI of 1866), ss. 4, 5, 7, 8, 9, 10, 15, 16. The petitioner and the respondent were married while professing the Hindu faith, and afterwards became converts to Christianity. The petitioner subsequently applied for dissolution of the marriage on the ground of his wife's adultery. Held, that, being a person professing Christianity at the time of presenting the petition, he was entitled to a dissolution of the marriage under the provisions of the Indian Divorce Act (IV of 1869). It is clear from the provisions of the Native Converts Marriage Dissolution Act (XXI of 1866) that a non-Christian marriage is not dissolved by the mere fact of the conversion of one or both of the parties to Christianity, and may therefore be dissolved in accordance with the provisions of Act IV of 1869. *GOWDHAN DASS v. 9. Native Christian—Hindu convert to Christianity. 2. cl. (9), and s. 10—Desertion—Adultery—Judicial separation. A husband and wife living in British Burma separated in 1881; the wife, for reasons of convenience, going to England, but with no intention of a permanent separation. After her departure, the husband contracted an adulterous connection with a Burmese woman, which was, however, unknown to the wife till 1875. During the separation he kept up correspondence with his wife, and in some of his letters he expressed an intention of never returning to England, and in 1868 expressed his willingness to aid her in obtaining a divorce. The wife never openly consented to the separation, although she could not be said to have made any active opposition to it. Held, that the wife was not entitled to a divorce, but only to a judicial separation, as there was no evidence of desertion. Desertion under the Indian Divorce Act implies "an abandonment against the wish of the person charging it," and although the word "abandonment" is undefined, the effect of the clause is to introduce into the Indian Statute the view adopted by the Courts in England in construing the English Act. The expression "against the wish of" is to be construed as meaning contrary to an actively expressed wish of the person charging abandonment, and notwithstanding the resistance or opposition of such person. A wife is bound, when seeking to prove desertion, to give evidence of conduct on her

The wife subsequently left her husband, and lived in adultery with another man. Both the husband and wife subsequently became Christians but the wife continued to live in adultery. ss. 13, 14, and 15—Cruelty—Condonation. The petitioner sued for a divorce on the ground of his wife's adultery. The adultery was admitted, but the respondent proved that her husband had been guilty of various acts of cruelty towards her, which disentitled him to have an unconditional divorce, and claimed on this ground a right to a judicial separation with alimony under s. 15 of the Indian Divorce Act. She was at the time of the suit living with the co-respondent. Held, that the respondent was not entitled to a decree for judicial separation with alimony. The Court has discretion, under s. 14 of the Act, to refuse a decree for divorce if the petitioner has been guilty of cruelty, although the cruelty may have been condoned. 5. — Conduct of petitioner conducing to adultery—Just and reasonable cause for desertion—Drunkenness of wife—Leaving wife without provision for maintenance. Evidence adduced at the hearing of a petition by a husband for the dissolution of his marriage with his wife showed that the petitioner had left his wife voluntarily on account of her drunkenness; that he had not maintained her or contributed to her support since so leaving her; that he had no reason for believing that his wife had committed adultery during the time he had lived with her; and that she had (if the evidence were believed) been leading an immoral life since the petitioner had so left her. The petition was dismissed, whereupon the petitioner appealed. Held, that the petitioner, having deserted his wife without just or reasonable cause, and without making any provision for her, had conduced to the adultery (if any had been committed), and the petition had been rightly dismissed. X v. Fitzgerald, I. R. 1 P. & D. 691, that the separation having originally been by mutual consent, desertion could not take place until cohabitation had been resumed, desertion not being proved, the wife was only entitled to a decree for judicial separation. Held, on appeal, that the separation, not being brought about by the act of the wife, but by the husband's misconduct, distinguished the case from that of Fitzgerald v. Fitzgerald, and that, under the circumstances, the desertion was proved, and the petitioner was entitled to a decree for a dissolution of marriage. Woods v. Woods.

6. Intervenor—Procedure after decree nisi on application by respondent for liberty to intervene. A wife sued for dissolution of her marriage on the grounds of her husband's adultery and cruelty. The respondent did not appear or file an answer, and the case was heard ex parte, and resulted in a decree nisi being passed. Subsequently, and before the decree was made absolute, the respondent applied for liberty to intervene under the provisions of cl. (c), s. 16 of the Divorce Act, the application being based on affidavits alleging, inter alia, collusion on the part of the petitioner. Held, following King v. King, I. L. R. 6 Bom. 416, that the respondent could not be allowed to intervene or be heard when the decree came on to be made absolute, but that the affidavits should be filed, and that notice should be given to the petitioner that the decree would not be made absolute until the matter set out in the affidavits as regarded the collusion had been cleared up. *STEPHEN v. 7. Intervenor—Right of third person to intervene—Procedure in case of intervening after decree nisi—Right to move for new trial—Practice—Procedure—Review—Civil Procedure Code, 1877, s. 633—Limitation Act, 1877, Art. 163—Motion to make absolute a decree nisi—Discretion of Court to refuse motion—Further enquiry ordered by Court. A wife sued for dissolution of marriage on the grounds of her husband's adultery and cruelty. The respondent entered an appearance through a solicitor, but did not file any written statement, and did not appear at the hearing, and a decree was made for the petitioner on the 26th July 1881. On the 3rd October, T, who had acted as solicitor for the respondent, appeared as intervenor, and under s. 16 of the Divorce Act (IV of 1869) obtained a rule nisi calling on the petitioner to show cause why a new trial should not be had and all further proceedings under the decree nisi should not be stayed. The rule was obtained upon an affidavit of T, in which he stated that since the date of the decree nisi he had been informed by the respondent that the petitioner had been, prior to that date, guilty of adultery with a person whose name he mentioned, that he was informed by the respondent that the reason why he (the respondent) had not defended the suit was that he wished to avoid making public the fact of his wife's adultery, and thus injuring the prospects of his children; that such application had been made both to the Advocate General of Bombay and to the Government Solicitor that they should intervene as representing the Queen's Proctor in India, but that both had declined. The respondent also filed an affidavit corroborating the statements made in T's affidavit. In showing cause against the rule it was contended on behalf of the petitioner that under the Divorce Act (IV of 1869) the proper course for a third person wishing to intervene was to file an appearance and then to show cause on the motion to make absolute the decree nisi, and that the rule for a new trial was a wrong in form. Held, that a new trial could not be granted, there being no provision in the Civil Procedure Code (Act X of 1857) for the granting of a new trial. The respondent himself could only have applied for a review of judgment under s. 623, and, even if otherwise entitled to a review, the motion of the 23rd October 1881, regarded as an application for a review, was too late under cl. 162, Sch. II of the Limitation Act, XV of 1877. Assuming that a third person had the right to apply for a review of judgment, T's application of 3rd October 1881 was also barred. Held, also, that under the Divorce Act (IV of 1869) a third person may show cause against a decree nisi being made absolute, but is not at liberty to institute proceedings, e.g. by obtaining a rule as was done in this case. Held, also, that T, who had been the solicitor to the respondent, and who was, in fact, acting at the instance of the respondent, was not entitled to intervene or to show cause against the decree being made absolute. A respondent has no right to show cause, and he cannot do indirectly through another what he is not permitted to do himself. Counsel on behalf of the petitioner subsequently moved to make the decree nisi absolute, and contended that the Court having held that T had no right to intervene or to show cause, the affidavits filed by him should be disregarded and taken off the file, and that no cause should be shown against the decree nisi.

The petitioner and the respondent, his wife, also forwarded to the High Court through the District judge not absolute. Held by KING, C. J., and BROOMFIELD, J., that the Court should accede to the prayer of the petition, and not make absolute the decree passed by the Judicial Commissioner of Oudh. Further, that a suit for a divorce is to be dealt with like all other cases between private litigants, and therefore the High Court should not make a decree nisi absolute without a motion being made to it to that effect. Held by BROOMFIELD, J., that proceedings in a Divorce Court are quasi-criminal, and that they are governed by rules in many respects vastly different from those which govern ordinary civil litigation, especially in the matter of compromise or mutual agreement between the parties. Held, further, that as in the Indian Divorce Act no express power is given to the parties to the suit to prevent a decree nisi passed in it by the District Judge from being made absolute, the principles of the practice of the English Divorce Act in such a matter might well be followed, and an order be made at the desire of both parties staying the proceedings in the cause and not setting aside the decree nisi which cannot be done. *Lewis v. The defence to the suit was that a previous marriage had, on 6th December 1871, been performed between the respondent and the petitioner's sister, and the respondent prayed that the second marriage might be declared a nullity. The ceremony of 6th December 1871 had taken place while the petitioner's sister was on her death-bed and in extremis, and had been celebrated in accordance with the rights of the Roman Catholic Church, and it was held both by the original Court and on appeal to be a valid marriage. The first Court (CUNNINGHAM, J.) held that the second marriage was null and void on the ground that the parties were within the prohibited degrees. Held by the Full Bench, that the prohibited degrees mentioned in s. 19 of the Divorce Act do not necessarily mean the degrees prohibited by the law of England. All that was known in respect of the parties to the marriage being that they were Roman Catholic subjects with Portuguese names, and it not having been found whether they were of English or any other European descent, or of native or mixed parentage. Held, that the prohibited degrees for the parties to the marriage were not the degrees prohibited by the law of England, but those prohibited by the customary law of the class to which they belonged, that is to say, the law of the Roman Catholic Church as applied in this country. *LOPEZ v. Held, that the respondent was entitled as of right to have only the deductions on account of pension and annuity funds taken into consideration in the computation of his nett income. The rule of English law that a material alteration of a document by a party to it after its execution, without the consent of the other party, renders it void, is in force in India. This rule does not apply to documents which are not the foundation of a plaintiff's claim, but are merely evidence of a defendant's pre-existing liability. Construction of document—Deed of trust executed by King of Oudh providing pensions to members of family and support to religious endowment out of interest on Government Loan subscription—“Heirs”—“Descendants”—Suit for pension on death of pensioner—Succession to pension. By a deed of trust dated 23rd November 1839, the King of Oudh appropriated the interest of a sum of 12 lakhs of rupees lent to the East India Company to the payment in perpetuity of pensions to certain persons named in the deed and to making provision for the support of a religious endowment. By Art. 1 (which stated that “the interest has been bestowed as a gift on the person named herein”) trustees were named and appointed, and after them “their descendants,” to manage the endowment, and a person was named, and his “descendants” after him, as the valid of the pensioners through whom the pensions were to be paid. Art. 2 commended the pensioners and their “descendants” to the kindness and support of the Government

“descendants” and in case no “descendant” remained, provided for the appointment of one of the pensioners “in place of the person dying without heir” Held by the Judicial Committee (reversing the decision of the Court of the Judicial Commissioners of Oudh), that on the true construction of the deed the succession to a pension on the death of one of the pensioners was not limited to an heir, who was also a descendant, but the heir by Mahomedan law of the deceased pensioner (in this case the sister) was entitled to succeed *Nawab Sultan Marum Begam v. Puse shortly afterwards got his share separated. Nem Ram died leaving a widow, Musammatt Phulla, and after his death Jivan Ram, Chatterpat, and Phulla joined in selling a portion of the property, the subject of the grant of 1866, to one Nur Ahmad. Held, on a suit by certain members of the joint Hindu family, who were not parties to the sale, to recover from the representatives of the vendee the share in the property sold, which had been of Nem Ram in his life-time, that the grant of 1866 conveyed the property to the grantees as joint tenants, and not as tenants-in-common, and therefore the transfer impugned was valid. *GOMIN PRASAD v. This document was ruled inadmissible for want of registration and plaintiff's suit thereupon dismissed. Held, that even if the document were admissible in evidence, its rejection did not involve the dismissal of the plaintiff's suit. The document in question was in the following terms:—"I take the shop on a rent of Rs50 per annum without any limit of time for ever. . . I shall pay the rent month by month rateably to Mohant Purn Das . . . On non-payment of rent a right to eject the tenants shall at once accrue to the owner of the shop." Held, that this was not a lease, nor even a counterpart of lease, but a mere statement of the intention of the writer, which might be given in evidence for what it was worth. *BENT v. 15. ——— Right of irrigation—Easements Act (V of 1882), s. 13—Purchase of land by Government at sale for arrears of revenue—Assessment of raiyats in occupation. In 1816, certain villages, forming part of a zamindari, were brought to sale by Government for arrears of revenue, and bought by Government. The wet lands in these villages were irrigated by a tank in another village, which also formed part of the zamindari, but was not included in the sale. The zamindar had himself occupied the wet lands prior to the sale, and continued his occupation thereafter, as a raiyat under Government. At a date prior to 1860, the zamindar sold his interest in the land, and, at the settlement which took place in that year, his vendee was assessed with a consolidated wet rate on it. In 1869, the Head Assistant Collector directed that the zamindar should be credited, yearly, with the difference between the consolidated wet rate and the dry rate. In doing this he acted without the authority of Government. In 1894, the Board of Revenue directed that no portion of the assessment should be credited to the zamindar, who now sued for a declaration of his right, and for the amount since collected. Held, that the meluram right in the villages passed, by the sale, to the Government, who were entitled by easement, to have the lands irrigated from the then existing source of irrigation, and to levy wet assessment on them. Also, that the action of the Settlement Department in assessing the consolidated wet rate was right, and that plaintiff was not entitled to the difference between the wet and dry assessment. Held, also, that the action of the Head Assistant Collector was beyond the scope of his authority, and not binding on the Government, who had neither authorized nor ratified it. SURANMI VENKATA PAPAYYA RAU v. At the time of the grant, 106 09 acres were under wet cultivation, the remainder being poramboke, prior minor inams and land under dry cultivation. The area of land under wet cultivation was subsequently increased, and plaintiff claimed to be entitled to water for the irrigation of this increased area without paying assessment thereon, and, in 1870, the Collector of the district permitted that increase. Plaintiff had now been assessed in respect of the increased area, and brought this suit for a declaration of his right and for a refund of the money paid by him under protest. Held, that plaintiff was entitled, under s. 13 (c) of the Easements Act, to irrigate 106 09 acres, and oo

1. ——— Title, proof of—Necessity for plaintiff to prove superior title. In a suit for ejectment the plaintiff must make out a title superior to that of the defendant before he can obtain a decree. MOHESH CHUNDER LAHOORY v. SUMBHOO CHUNDER ROY CHOWDERY . . . 2 May 303

2. ——— Necessity for plaintiff to prove superior title. In a case of ejectment (even though the dispute be merely as to which of the two parties the land belongs) the plaintiff must succeed by the strength of his title only, and not by the weakness of the defence. SUTTO SURY GHOSAL v. DHONE KRISTNO SINGAR . . . 1 W. R. 88

SHAM NARAIN v. COURT OF WARDS . . . 20 W. R. 187

3. ——— Necessity for plaintiff to prove superior title. It is essential that a claimant, seeking to oust a party in possession of an estate, should establish his own right to the estate, and not rely upon the failure of the title impeached. A decree of the Sudder Court held that, although the title set up by the plaintiff was wholly bad, yet that a party defendant with whom the plaintiff had, by a deed of compromise, agreed to divide the estate, had shown his title, and on that ground decreed possession against the other defendant. Such decree reversed by the Privy Council on appeal, as the effect of the decree would be (i) to defeat the defendant's possessory title without giving him an opportunity of contesting the title of the party by whom he is turned out of possession, and (ii) as it was a violation of legal principles which protect possession and of the substantial principles of justice which regulate the joinder of parties and union of titles to sue in one suit. JOWALA BUNSH v. DHARUN SINGH . . . 10 Moo. I. A. 611

4. ——— Proof of title of vendor where plaintiff is a purchaser. In a suit for ejectment, strict proof of title must be adduced by a plaintiff. It is not sufficient for him to prove that the deed under which he claims was duly executed, he must be put to proof of the title of his vendor. KALEE PERSHAD MOTTRA v. ITCHA MOYEE . . . 24 W. R. 337

TIBBY v. KRISTO MOHUN BOSE. HORENDEO v. AKBAR ALI . . . L. R. 1 I. A. 76

5. ——— Suit for possession of chur land—Onus probandi. Where a party seeks to turn out another in possession of chur land which the plaintiff claims as a part of a mahal purchased by him from Government, the onus is on the plaintiff to prove that the land is the property of the defendant; because, unless it is proved to be the property of the plaintiff, the latter is not entitled to turn out the former. SHORNOMOYEE v. WATSON & Co.

6. ——— Present right to possession—Suit by reversioner against widow for possession. A plaintiff who has not a present right to possession cannot sue to eject. 7. ——— Ejectment suit by owner of "inter esse termini"—Landlord and tenant—Tenant remaining in occupation after passing a rannama—Effect of the rannama. The first and second defendants were sub-tenants of the third defendant, who had certain land which was part of the mam village of D. Shortly after the date of this rannama, the mamdar gave the land to the plaintiff, who now sued to obtain it from the defendants, who had remained in possession. Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to sue in ejectment, although he had not been put in possession of the land. *BHUTIA DHONDU v. EJECTMENT, SUIT FOR—contd.

Held, that defendant's only title was the right to sue to set aside the sale in execution under which plaintiff held possession, and that this title did not avail him to eject plaintiff without a decree first obtained. BENOSHNEE DHUR DASS v. BHARAWAY DASS 24 W. R. 117

10. ——— Failure to prove title—Possession by defendants under void decree. I mortgaged to the plaintiff his house and certain undivided land in which H and others, Hindu co-parceners, had a share. R bought the interest of H in the land at a Court sale, and let it to H and I, who, failing to pay rent, were sued by R, who got a decree for possession. This decree was transferred for execution to the Collector, who sold the land and rateably distributed the proceeds, except to I who declined to take the amount tendered as his share. In a suit against I and the purchasers under R's decree to recover his mortgage-debt by a sale of the property mortgaged to him, the proceedings of the Collector were held to be without jurisdiction, and the plaintiff was entitled to ignore them, and assert his claim under the mortgage. Held, that the defendants, being in actual possession,—albeit through a sale under a void decree,—could not be ousted in the present suit, and were entitled to say that the plaintiff had not proved his title to sell the specific lands mortgaged. NARAYAN NAQARKAR v. VITHU JAKHOJI I L. R. 8 Bom. 539

11. ——— Right to eject mortgagee of raiyat with right of occupancy. The sons of a zamindar, whose zamindari estate is held on mortgage by a third party, are not justified in ousting the mortgagee of a raiyat having a right of occupancy. KHOSRALEE v. BULJEET 2 Agra 79

12. ——— Demand of possession—Proceedings under Criminal Procedure Code, s. 530. Proceedings in a Criminal Court, under s. 530 of the Code of Criminal Procedure, are not a sufficient demand of possession for the purpose of maintaining an ejectment suit. RAM ROTTO v. MUNDOL v. NETRO KALLY DASSEE I L. R. 4 Calc. 339

13. ——— Fraudulent transfer of property—Defendant not in possession. In a suit for possession by parties claiming as mortgagors

DOORDANAH KHANUM 19 W. R. 44

14. ——— Mortgage—Redemption, Decree for. If a suit is brought in ejectment, and the defendant proves that he holds a mortgage, a decree for redemption cannot be made without his consent. CHANDU v. KOMBH I. L. R. 9 Mad. 199

15. ——— Misstatement of area of land—Precise definition by other description. In a suit for ejectment a mere misstatement of the area of the land sought to be recovered ought not to be regarded as anything more than a "false demonstration." If the space is precisely defined by other description, the statement of its measurement in square yards may be treated as surplusage and of no consequence. VIJAYANDAS MADHAVAS v. MANOMED ALI KHAN I. L. R. 5 Bom. 208

21. — Sale by mortgagor of parts of the mortgaged property—Suit for sale by mortgagee without joining the vendees—Subsequent suit to eject mortgagor's vendees—Cause of action—Right of suit. A mortgagor, who had given a simple mortgage over certain land, sold some of the mortgaged property. The defence of the defendants (second party) mainly was that the suit was bad for multifariousness, inasmuch as they were severally in possession of definite and

26. — Ejectment of under-ryat—Delay in suing—"Holding over," presumption over Act—Bengal Tenancy Act (VIII of 1855), s. 43. After the expiry of a written lease, a mere delay in the institution of a suit by the lessor for ejectment of the lessee without notice to quit, is no reason for dismissal of the suit on the ground that the lessee was allowed to 'hold over.' *RATAN LAL GIR v. 27. — Res judicata—Agra Tenancy Act (Local II of 1901), s. 199—Suit for ejectment in Revenue Court—Omission on part of defendant to plead title in himself. In a suit for ejectment under Act No II of 1901, the defendants did not plead their own title to the plot in suit, and in fact did not oppose the suit for ejectment. Held, that a subsequent suit brought in a Civil Court by the then defendants for proprietary possession of the same plot was barred by the principle of res judicata. *Ram Kishori v. II, Arts 139, 113—Lease—Forfeiture—Suit for ejectment. A lease granted for the reclamation of certain jungle lands provided that the lessee should hold the lands rent-free for six years and that in the beginning of the seventh year he should cause the lands to be measured and a settlement of rent made in respect of the reclaimed lands failing which the landlord would be entitled to possession.

Held, that a suit by the lessor for ejectment on the ground of the lessee's failure to comply with the above-mentioned provision in the lease was governed by Art. 143, and not by Art. 139, Sch. II, of the Limitation Act. GOOH SHUKH v. H. MATHEWS (1907) 11 C. W. N. 681

30. — Suit by Committee of management—Appointment of a Committee for management of property—Appointment acquiesced in by owner—Committee in management for a long time—Suit by Committee against a trespasser—Title. The Parsi Panchayat at Bombay appointed a committee to manage the property of the Parsi Anjuman at Surat. The committee managed the property for a very long time—sixty years—with the authority and acquiescence of the Parsi Anjuman. Subsequently the defendant having trespassed on the property, the committee sued him in ejectment. The defendant contended that the plaintiffs had no right to sue for the recovery of the property as they were neither the owners nor the nominees of the Anjuman. Held, that the plaintiffs being in possession for a long time with the authority and acquiescence of the owners, namely, the Parsi Anjuman at Surat, were entitled to recover possession from a trespasser. *JIVANJI JANSHEDJ v. The coupling of the word with the words "terms," "conditions" in s. 107 of the Act shows the intention of the Legislature to be that the officer authorized to grant the permission should have power to impose any reasonable terms and conditions he thinks proper as conditions precedent to the grant, whether they relate to the terms of the agreement itself or being extraneous to it relate to the execution or other considerations which have

1. ——— Legal rights of owner of land —Owner not compellable to accept compensation instead of removal of encroachment. In a suit to recover land adjacent to a temple belonging to the defendants, on which land the defendants had encroached by building verandahs, the lower Courts found that the land sued for was the property of the plaintiff subject to the defendants' right of access to the temple, and directed the defendants to pay compensation to the plaintiff for the encroachment. The plaintiff appealed to the High Court. Held, that, the land being found to be the plaintiff's, the Courts could not compel him to part with his legal rights and accept compensation against his will, however reasonable it might appear to be. The defendants were accordingly ordered to remove the verandahs complained of and to restore possession of the land to the plaintiff. GOVIND VETKAJI P. SADASHIV BHARMA SHET

3. ——— Stranger building on land of another—Acquiescence of owner—Delay of owner in suing possession—Form of decree. It is well established law in England that if a stranger builds on the land of another, although believing it to be his own, the owner is entitled to recover the land with the building on it, unless there are special circumstances amounting to a standing by so as to induce the belief that the owner intended to forego his right or to an acquiescence in his building on the land. This is also the law in India, with the exception that the party building on the land of another is allowed to remove the building. Delay by the owner in bringing a suit is not in itself sufficient to create an equity in favour of the person spending money on the land so as to deprive the owner of his strict rights. The decree made by the High Court was that the plaintiff should recover the land with liberty to the defendant forthwith to commence to remove his building and to restore the property to the condition in which it was when he took possession, the same to be completed within one year from date of decree. In default, the plaintiff to be at liberty to remove the building at the expense of the defendant. PREMJI JIVAN BHATE P. CANNON JUMA AHMED gifts in the will could be treated as charitable bequests, possibly the Advocate General could sue. Held on appeal, reversing the decision of the lower Court, that the right in which the plaintiffs sued was sufficiently shown, and that the object of the suit was not to assert any personal right of ownership in the plaintiffs. Held, further, that the Advocate General was not a necessary party, although it was desirable that such suits should be brought only with his consent, or by the leave of the Court. Held, further, that suits of this description do not fall under Act XX of 1863, but come under the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court, inherited from the Supreme Court, and conferred upon that Court by its Charter—a jurisdiction similar in its general features to that of the Lord Chancellor in England. The defendant pleaded (inter alia) that the property was not a public, religious, and charitable trust; that he was not a trustee; that the plaintiffs had no right to sue; and that the suit was time-barred. Held, (1) that, having regard to the fact that a certain number of the public had always used the temple, that there was attached to it a dharmashala, and that the surplus funds not required for the service of the temple were to be applied to had originally been part according to the provisions of s. 5, Regulation VIII of 1793. The decree directed that, until separation, rent should be paid by the talukhdar to the zamindar, "according to the jumma already assessed upon the talukh"; this revenue to be, on the separation being effected, deducted from that assessed upon the zamindar. Proceedings with a view to separation then continued, but litigation and delays ensued, with the result that no separation had been effected when these suits were instituted in 1892 and 1893. In these suits, the holders of shares into which the zamindari had been partitioned claimed to enhance the rent on the talukh. Held, that the decree of 1807, right of enhancement. S. 67 of the Bengal Tenancy Act, 1883, applies only to rent payable quarterly. HEMIANTA KUMARI DEBI v. JAGADINDRA NATH ROY. I. L. R. 22 Cal. 214

10. — Inamdar—Tenants in possession before grant of inam. An inamdar, though he cannot eject his tenants who have been in possession before the grant of the inam as long as they pay the rent due for their land, may nevertheless raise such rent at his pleasure (they not having acquired a prescriptive title), and is not restrained in doing so by the rates fixed by the Government survey. HARI BIN JOTI v. NARAYAN ACHARYA. 6 Bom. A. C. 23

20. — Miras—Limited power to enhance. An inamdar's power to enhance the rent of miras tenants is limited. He cannot demand more rent than what is fair and equitable according to the custom of the country. TRATARNAY GUJAR v. BAYASI NAMAZI. I. L. R. 3 Bom. 141

21. — Mirasdars—Right of inamdar to enhance their rent—Custom. Mirasdars in an inam village cannot always claim to hold at a fixed rent. An inamdar can enhance their rents within the limits of custom. VISHWANATH BHIRAJI v. DHONDAPPA. I. L. R. 17 Bom. 476

22. — Permanent tenant. In every part of India the Government or its alienee is debarred, if not by law (as in Bengal), yet by the custom of the country, from enhancing the assessment of permanent tenants beyond a certain limit. What that limit is, must be determined by the circumstances of each case. In a suit by an inamdar, holding under a grant from Scindha made in 1793, against his permanent tenant for an enhanced rent, the Court, in the absence of law or contract to the contrary, affirmed the plaintiff's right to enhance the assessment to the extent to which, according to the old custom of the country, Scindha would have been entitled to enhance it, and upon a virtual admission of the defendant

Act VIII of 1859, ss. 8, 14, 15—Notice to quit.* A landlord seeking to obtain an enhanced rate of rent on account of nij jote land held by a tenant without a right of occupancy has no right to obtain a judicial assessment upon the footing of a notice under Bengal Act VIII of 1869, ss. 14 and 15. His right in ac-

24. — Lessee of house—Rent of sub-tenant. The lessee of a share of a house has a right to raise the rent of such share, while in the occupation of a sub-tenant without a lease, after due notice of the increased rate, and to proceed to eject him if he refuses to pay the higher rent, even though he has been in possession for many years. *RAU LALL v. 25. — Shilatri lands—Dom. Reg. I of 1808, s. 4—Right of inamdar to raise assessment on shilatri lands. Government, by an indenture, dated the 25th January 1810, conveyed to A and B, and their heirs and assigns, certain villages in the island of Salsette, with the exception of such spots of shilatri tenura as might be therein, or on any part thereof, which could only become the property of A and B, on their purchasing the same from the proprietors. Since 1810, the holders of these shilatri lands had paid to the grantees and their heirs assessment (or rent) at a fixed rate which, before the grant, they used to pay to Government.

has a right to enhance as against one, who holds on the same terms as the defendant does; the test is whether there has been any and what enhancement according to the usage of the locality in respect of land of the same description held on the same tenure. *RAJYA v. In a suit for enhancement it was found that the defendant had, prior to institution, sold his holding, which by custom was transferable without the consent of the landlord, to a third party. There had been no mutation of names, or payment of a nazaf, or execution of fresh lease; but the landlord had received rent from the third party, and was fully aware of the transfer. Held, that the connection of the defendant with the holding had come to an end, and the suit against him did not lie. ABDUL AZIZ KHAN v. Suit for enhancement (under the old law) of rent of a talukh held to be a dependent talukh within the meaning of s. 51, Regulation VIII of 1793, although not duly registered by the zamindar. Held, that the defendant having made out a strong prima facie case to prove that he and those through whom he claimed had held the talukh at a fixed rent from a date more than twelve years prior to the Decennial Settlement, and the zamindar having relied on the weakness of the defence and having failed to show that the rent had varied, the tenure was exempt from re-assessment. MOHAMMAD DOSSEE v. 3. — Pottah subsequent to Permanent Settlement—Pottah not inconsistent with holding. When a raiyat, in an enhancement suit, proves uniform payment of rent for twenty years previous to the suit, the production of a pottah dated more than twenty years before the suit, but subsequent to the Permanent Settlement, if not inconsistent with the inference that it is a continuation of a former state of things, will not interfere with or defeat the presumption of uniform payment from the Permanent Settlement. KISNEY MOHUN GHOSH v. 4. — Failure to prove pottah—Act X of 1859, s. 3, 4—Presumption. In a suit for enhancement of rent, a raiyat is not to be precluded from the benefit of the presumption under s. 4 of Act X of 1859, on proof of having held at a fixed rent for a period of twenty years merely because he has failed to prove a pottah which he has set up not inconsistent with that presumption. GIRISH CHUNDR BOSE v. 5. — Existence of kabuliat within 20 years—Bengal Rent Act VIII of 1859, s. 4. The presumption arising in favour of a tenant from a twenty years' occupation, when it is supported by evidence, is not necessarily displaced by the discovery of a kabuliat bearing a subsequent date. Such a kabuliat is as consistent with the confirmation of a pre-existing rent as with the settlement of a new rate, and it is for the Court to balance the inferences drawn from the kabuliat against those arising from the twenty years' holding. SOORJOMONEY DOSSEE v. A defendant who rested his defence in a suit for enhancement upon a pottah, which he set up, as entitling him to hold free from enhancement under s. 4, Act X of 1859, cannot plead that the tenure is protected from enhancement by reason of payment of rent at a uniform rate for twenty years. JAUN ALI v. 61. ——— Informality in notice. Informality in a notice for enhancement of rent was not allowed to prevail in this case where the defect was held to have been made good by the evidence on the record, and where there could be no doubt that the tenant knew exactly the nature of the demand he had to meet, and where also the objection was a mere after-thought and not put forward until after the order of remand by the High Court. WOOMA CHURN DUTT v. GRISH CHUNDER BOSE . . . 17 W. R. 32

62. ——— Omission in notice. Where a raiyat well knew and pleaded to the grounds of enhancement, the mere omission of the words "suo

Nor was the omission of the words "otherwise than by the agency and at the expense of the raiyat" considered material when the plaintiff distinctly stated in his plaint that the productive powers of the soil had increased owing to the land having been irrigated from the plaintiff's khas tank. *WATSON & Co. v. Dismissal of suit for want of proper notice—Obiter dicta. Where a suit for enhancement of rent is dismissed on the ground that no notice was served, any decision in the Court's judgment as regards the mal or lakhiraj character of the land must be deemed to be mere obiter. Where it is found in such a suit that the notice did not state that the raiyat pays less than raiyats of the same class, the informality may be overlooked if there is evidence on the record of the rates of rent payable by such raiyat; but if there is no evidence of that nature, the suit must be dismissed. *MOTHOOPNATH SIRCAR v. 1. ———— Distinction between raiyats with and without rights of occupancy—Act X of 1859, s. 17, cl. 1. In ascertaining tho rates of rent, the Courts should not fail to recognize the important distinction between raiyats having a right of occupancy and other raiyats, in a case of enhancement under cl. 1, s. 17, Act X of 1859. LUCHUN v. It was not intended that, if there was no land of a similar description and with like advantage in the same village as the land in suit, it should be impossible to enhance the rent of a non occupancy raiyat upon any other ground. HOSAIN ALI KHAN v. Bengal Act VIII of 1869, s. 18, cl. 1, cannot be restricted to lands in contract with that to which the rent suit relates. The general rule may be stated to be that the plaintiff is not, on the one hand, restricted to a comparison with lands immediately contiguous, and must not, on the other, pick and choose particular places, but should consider the rates higher rates for lands of the same description and quality, and the only question is the extent to which the defendant is liable to enhancement, the clause must not be so construed as to deprive a zamindar of his fair rents; but the Court should be guided by a consideration of what is fair and equitable, as provided by s. 5, subject to the limitations prescribed in s. 17. If a generally prevailing rate cannot be found, the currency of the different rates being so nearly equal as to make it impossible to say which is the prevailing rate, the Court is not in error in taking an average. *DENA OAZEE v. In a suit for enhancement of rent on the ground specified in s. 17 of Act X of 1859, that "the value of the produce, or the productive powers of the land, have been increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the raiyat" the amount of the increased rent is not to be ascertained by establishing a proportion between the former rent and the old produce; but the absolute increased value of the produce being ascertained, the enhanced rent is to be arrived at by considering what part of such increased value ought to be apportioned to the tenant as the produce of his capital and labour, and what part of it is rent, that is, as it has been defined, "that portion of the value of the whole produce which remains to the owner of the land after all the outgoings belonging to the cultivation of whatever kind have been paid, including the profits of the capital employed, estimated according to the usual and ordinary rate of agricultural capital at the time being." Rent cannot be enhanced beyond the rate demanded in the plaint, and it can be enhanced only in respect of such part of the land as has increased in value. *HILLS v. 50. — Wages of riyats—Fair and equitable rent—Loss for crops destroyed. The produce of a bigha of dhan in 1267 and 1268 should not be valued at the prices of 1269. Whether a raiyat borrows his food or not, he cannot receive his wages out of the proceeds of crops before the crops are gathered. An allowance for a house cannot be made to a raiyat in addition to a fair allowance for wages. Loss on account of crops destroyed or injured cannot be taken into consideration twice over: (i) in ascertaining the average of the quantities and prices, and (ii) in making an allowance for risks based upon injuries done to the crops, of which the quantities and prices must have been taken into consideration in calculating the average. A landlord cannot be charged with a rate of interest or profit on capital far beyond the ordinary rate of interest or profit, and also with an allowance for ensuring the return of the capital with such extraordinary rate of interest. One rate of rent cannot be fixed for a raiyat who spends his own capital, and another for a raiyat who is compelled to borrow it. The rate of rent which the landlord has a right by law to demand does not depend upon the size of the land. What or lands advanced be fair and landlord is concerned. A raiyat who, but for the Permanent Settlement, would have been entitled to no more than half of the gross proceeds of his land, is not over-assessed when he is allowed to retain at least five-sixths of the gross proceeds for his labour and profit on capital, and called upon to pay something less than the other one-sixth as rent to the zamindar. HILLS v. ISICKER GHOSE

W. R. F. B. 131

Held in the same case on review.—The condition and rights of rayats, whose tenures have commenced since the Permanent Settlement, depend not on status, but on contract and on laws and regulations specially enacted. In 1793 the zamindars were declared to be the proprietors of the lands. From 1793 to 1812 they were prevented from granting pottahs or leases to rayats for more than ten years, and could not, therefore, have created rayals with hereditary rights of property in the soil. After Regulation V of 1812 they could grant leases at any rate and for any term. By the retrospective effect of s. 2, Regulation VIII of 1819, leases in perpetuity or for terms granted prior to 1812 were rendered valid. In this case it was admitted that the value of the produce had increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the rayat, and that the notice required by s. 13, Act X of 1859, had been served before the end of Chaitro in the year preceding that for which enhancement was claimed. Upon being served with that notice, the defendant had a right to quit according to s. 19. The Statute of Limitation does not give him a right of occupancy under s. 6 by holding for twelve years. But for Act X of 1859, therefore, the defendant (assuming that he was not holding for a fixed term, and that his tenancy commenced since the Permanent Settlement) would have been liable to have his tenancy determined, and to be turned out of possession at the end of 1267, if he and his produce and cost of production. After the Permanent Settlement, and before Act X of 1859, a right of occupancy was not acquired by a rayat merely by holding or cultivating land for a period of twelve years. When that Act created the right, s. 5 declared the rayats having rights of occupancy should be entitled to hold at fair and equitable rates, thus leaving it to the Court to determine in every case of dispute what is a fair and equitable rate. To be fair and equitable, it must be so as regards both parties. ISICKER GHOSE v. HILLS be at liberty, in each case, to prove any special circumstances tending to show that the application of the rule of proportion to that particular case would work injustice. Per FINEK, J.—When the Collector is called upon in any given case to determine the rent which it is fair and equitable that the rayat should pay, he ought to enquire:

50. ————— Wages of rayats—Fair and equitable rent—Loss for crops destroyed. The produce of a bigha of dhan in 1267 and 1268 should not be valued at the prices of 1269. Whether a rayat borrows his food or not, he cannot receive his wages out of the proceeds of crops before the crops are gathered. An allowance for a house cannot be made to a rayat in addition to a fair allowance for wages. Loss on account of crops destroyed or injured cannot be taken into consideration twice over: (i) in ascertaining the average of the quantities and prices, and (ii) in making an allowance for risks based upon injuries done to the crops, of which the quantities and prices must have been taken into consideration in calculating the average. A landlord cannot be charged with a rate of interest or profit on capital far beyond the ordinary rate of interest or profit, and also with an allowance for ensuring the return of the capital with such extraordinary rate of interest. One rate of rent cannot be fixed for a rayat who spends his own capital, and another for a rayat who is compelled to borrow it. The rate of rent which the landlord has a right by law to demand does not depend upon the size of the holding of the circumstances of the rayat. What is a fair and equitable rent for one rayat for lands of a similar description and with similar advantages in the same neighbourhood must also be fair and equitable for another, so far as the landlord is concerned. A rayat who, but for the Permanent Settlement, would have been entitled to no

Held in the same case on review.—The condition and rights of raiyats, whose tenures have commenced since the Permanent Settlement, depend not on status, but on contract and on laws and regulations specially enacted. In 1793 the zamindars were declared to be the proprietors of the lands. From 1793 to 1812 they were prevented from granting pottahs or leases to raiyats for more than ten years, and could not, therefore, have created raiyats with hereditary rights of property in the soil. After Regulation V of 1812 they could grant leases at any rate and for any term. By the retrospective effect of s. 2, Regulation VIII of 1819, leases in perpetuity or for terms granted prior to 1812 were rendered valid. In this case it was admitted that the value of the produce had increased otherwise than by the agency or at the expense of the raiyat, and that the notice required by s. 13, Act X of 1859, had been served before the end of Chaitro in the year preceding that for which enhancement was demanded (assuming that he was not holding for a fixed term, and that his tenancy commenced since the Permanent Settlement) would have been liable to have his tenancy determined, and to be turned out of possession at the end of 1267, if he and his landlord could not agree as to the rent to be paid.

produce and cost of production. After the Permanent Settlement, and before Act X of 1859, no right of occupancy was not acquired by a raiyat merely by holding or cultivating land for a period of twelve years. When that Act created the right, s. 5 declared the raiyats having rights of occupancy should be entitled to hold at fair and equitable rates, thus leaving it to the Court to determine in every case of dispute what is a fair and equitable rate. To be fair and equitable, it must be so as regards both parties. ISHORE GHOSH v. HILLS pergunnah customary rates. Either party should be at liberty, in each case, to prove any special circumstances tending to show that the application of the rule of proportion to that particular case would work injustice. Per TREVOR, J.—When the Collector is called upon in any given case to determine the rent which it is fair and equitable that the raiyat should pay, he ought to enquire

(i) Whether at the last antecedent period, when the arrangement between the parties (either then created or previously existing) was such as must, by reason of tacit acquiescence or otherwise, be taken to have been fair and equitable, that arrangement contained express stipulations as to rent; if so, then these stipulations, unless the reason for them is gone, should be followed in arriving at the rent for the new pottah. (ii) If the Collector finds no express agreement to guide him, then he must ascertain whether the raiyat is legally entitled by custom, based either on his personal status or on the character of the land occupied by him, to any definite share of the produce of the land or to any beneficial interest in it. If the raiyat is so entitled, the rent must be adjusted accordingly. (iii) If neither express agreement nor legal right in the raiyat be found to have determined the custom ought to be complied with, and the rates adhered to. The fair presumption will be, in the absence of evidence or unless a different foundation be actually shown, that the rate was originally based upon the principle of sharing the produce of the land between the raiyat and zamindar in a fixed ratio. The result of applying this presumption would be that the new fair and equitable rent would be the same proportionate part of the new produce that the old rent was of the old produce. In all cases, the duration of the intended pottah must be taken into consideration as an element affecting the question of fairness and equity. Per NORMAN, J.—(i) With respect to the rents of raiyats having mere

In a suit to recover rent at Rs. 124 for the year 1871-72, the Subordinate Judge gave a decree for Rs. 1062-15-6, a re-measurement of the talukh having shown a decrease in the amount decreed. Judge Soorki

A subsequently brought a suit against C, in which he obtained an ex parte decree and assigned his interest under the decree to D and E. D and E neglected to have their names substituted for that of A on the record. C applied for and obtained an order setting aside the ex parte decree, and allowing him to come in and defend the suit on deposit in Court of the sum sued for. At the re-hearing the suit was again determined in favour of A. B thereupon, in execution of his decree for costs, attached the moneys in the hands of the Court in the suit of A against C. 4. — Assignment by power-of-attorney—Firm—Partnership—Contract made by one member of firm binding on firm. The firm of S & Co, the partners of which were W S and F E, took a contract from Government on 12th November 1877 to construct a barrel-house at the Gunpowder Manufactory at Kurkee, and on the 28th November 1877 the plaintiff agreed to advance moneys "up to Rs. 15,000" for the purpose of enabling the firm to execute the contract.

the same day the firm executed a power-of-attorney to the plaintiff, authorizing him to receive from the Government Engineer all such sums to be paid to the firm under the contract, which plaintiff in fact received at Poona.

former one, to make further advances to the firm up to Rs. 16,000 in addition to Rs. 15,000 on the same terms as those mentioned in the previous agreement, and by means of these advances the firm was enabled to complete the contract.

The plaintiff due to his negligence, failed to attach the moneys on 30th September 1878, and the sum attached was paid to the defendant. The plaintiff sued the defendant to recover from him Rs. 634-11-0. Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover the sum from the defendant.

that the first agreement of 28th November 1877, coupled with the execution of the power-of-attorney to him of the same date, amounted to an assignment to the plaintiff of the sums to become due to S & Co. on the bills passed by the Executive Engineer. Held, also, that the second agreement, although made by one member only of the firm of S & Co., with the plaintiff was under the circumstances both necessary to the carrying out of the partnership business and in accordance with the ordinary practice of such partnerships as that of S & Co., and was therefore binding on the firm, and that the two agreements, accompanied by the power-of-attorney, operated as an assignment of all the moneys to become due on the contractors' bills as a security for the plaintiff's advances with interest, and that the plaintiff was therefore entitled to recover the sum claimed from the defendant. *JAGABHAI LALLUBHAI v. In accordance with this order, W was taken to the District Superintendent of Police, and was sent by that officer to A. Held, that the Magistrate's order might be taken to have been passed under s. 167 of the Code, and therefore W was lawfully committed to the custody of the police, and A was bound to detain him in such custody until released therefrom by due course of law; and that consequently A, having negligently suffered W to escape, had been properly convicted under s. 223 of the Penal Code. *EMPRESS v. ## 2. DENIAL OF TITLE.

1. — Parol evidence to prove different title from that in lease—Suit for rent. A executed a kabuliat for a term of years to B as zamindar. B gave a patni of the zamindari to C. C instituted a suit for arrears of rent under the lease for a term of years against A, the lessee. A, in defence, admitted the execution of the lease to B, but denied that B was his real lessor and beneficially entitled to the rent, alleging that B was only a benamidar for a third party. Held, that in India the English doctrine of estoppel did not apply, and that A was competent in a suit for rent to deny his lessor's title as stated in the lease, and by parol evidence to prove a different title to that recited in the lease. *DONNELLY v. ## 2. — Evidence Act, s. 116—

Landlord and tenant. S. 116 of the Evidence Act does not debar one who has once been a tenant from contending that the title of his landlord has been lost or that his tenancy has determined. It precludes him only during the continuance of the tenancy from contending that his landlord had no title at the commencement of the tenancy. AYYU v. RAMAKRISHNA SASTRI, I. L. R. 3 Mad. 226

In a suit to eject a tenant holding over after the expiration of his lease, it is not competent to the tenant to set up that his landlord, the plaintiff, holds under an invalid lakhsar tenure, and that the zamindar and not the plaintiff is entitled to the land. *MOHSEN CHUNDER BISWAS v. The plaintiff sued for possession of a certain house, alleging the expiry of the lease (kabuliat), on which the defendants held it as tenants. The mamlatdar dismissed the suit, being of opinion that the plaintiff had no title to the house when he granted the lease, and the house belonged to the defendants when they executed the lease. Held, reversing the decree, that the defendants (tenants), having executed the kabuliat, could not deny the plaintiff's title as a ground for refusing to give up possession, and the mamlatdar himself, therefore, could not go into the question. *Parbhudas v. 5. ——— Regular suit by tenant. If the existence of a tenancy be established by the fact of the tenant's payment of rent to his landlord or otherwise, the tenant cannot ordinarily dispute the title of his landlord in a suit brought against him for recovery of possession. He must first give up possession, and then, if he has any title at hand, that title may be tried in a suit of ejectment against the landlord. VASUDEV DAI v. BIBAJI RANU . . . 6 Bom. A. C. 176

A, a raiyat, being in possession of a certain holding, executed a kabuliat regarding this holding in favour of B (who claimed the land in which the holding was included, under a derivative title from the last owner), and paid rent to B thereunder. Held, that A was not estopped by s.

The karnavan of a Malabar taluk, having the jennu title to certain land and holding the umma right in a certain public devasom to which other land belonged, demised lands of both descriptions on kanom to the defendants' taluk, and subsequently executed to the plaintiff a muknani of the first-mentioned land and purported to sell to him the jennu title to the last mentioned land. In a suit brought by the plaintiff to redeem the kanom and to recover arrears of rent—Held, that the defendants were not estopped from denying the plaintiff's right to redeem on the ground that he did not represent the devasom; and that the plaintiff, who had denied the title of the devasom in the Court of first instance, was not entitled to redeem the kanom as a whole, by virtue of his admitted title to part of the premises comprised in it. *KORRA PANTHAR v. 14. — Mortgage by tenant at fixed rates—Ejectment of mortgagor by zamindar—Suit for redemption against mortgagee in possession of the mortgaged property. The rule of law which prohibits a mortgagee or tenant from disputing his mortgagor's or landlord's title does not bar the mortgagee or tenant from showing that the title of his mortgagor or landlord under which he entered has determined. Hence where a tenant at fixed rates, who, having mortgaged his fixed rate holding by a usufructuary mortgage and put the mortgagee in possession, was ejected by the zamindar, subsequently sued the mortgagee, who had remained in possession after his mortgagor's ejectment, for redemption. Held, that the mortgagee could plead successfully that the mortgagor's interest in the holding had determined by the ejectment of the mortgagor. *NARCHEBI BHAGAT v. The defendants were the descendants of the original owners of the village, who, about 1768, finding themselves unable to meet the expenses attaching to the village, gave up their title to it to the ancestors of the plaintiffs, on condition of retaining a third of the lands rent-free as their vanto or share, subject to no other condition but a house tax. Held, that the circumstances did not constitute the relationship of landlord and tenant between the parties. The fact that the defendants had for some years paid to the plaintiffs part of the amount of quit-rent levied from the plaintiffs by Government did not estop the defendants, when better informed of their rights, from contesting the title of the plaintiffs to any further payments. *JESINGBHAI v. In order to defeat the execution of that decree, G, in collusion with one B, permitted the latter to obtain a decree based upon an award against him, and to sell the land in execution, at which sale B himself and another person purchased it. In 1858 T attached the land in execution of his decree, but the attachment was raised on the application of defendants Nos. 1 and 3, who alleged that the property was theirs. In 1876 the plaintiff, who was the son of G, sued the defendants to recover possession. He alleged that surplus of the sale-proceeds was paid to the defendants, who received it and divided it between themselves. Plaintiff, having been obstructed by the defendants in obtaining possession of the house, brought the present suit to recover possession. The Court of first instance rejected the plaintiff's claim on the ground that the house was the undivided family property of the defendants, and that the plaintiff should bring a partition suit. The plaintiff appealed to the Assistant Judge, who was of opinion that the defendant's omission to set up their title to the property in question at the execution-sale and the acceptance of the surplus of the proceeds of sale estopped them from impeaching the sale and setting up their title. He therefore reversed the lower Court's decree, and awarded the house to the plaintiff. Proceedings in execution are in invitum as regards the judgment-debtor, and he is in no way called upon to notice them. ment executed as guardian of D a mortgage of mouzabs in favour of M. The money was advanced and the mortgage executed at the instigation of R and with his consent, and on his representation that D was the duly adopted son of A, and it was admitted that the money was advanced for, and specifically applied towards the payment of, decrees obtained against A in his lifetime and against his estate after his death. Died in 1878. On the 14th August 1890, M instituted a suit against D upon his mortgage, and in that suit he made S a party defendant, as being a purchaser of the mortgagor's interest in one of the mouzabs included in his mortgage. On the 26th June 1832, M obtained a decree declaring that he was entitled to recover the amount due by sale of the mortgaged mouzabs. In the proceedings taken in execution of that decree, M was opposed by L, who was afterwards held to be a benamidar for S, who claimed that he had, on the 8th November 1830, purchased five out of the seven mouzabs at a sale in execution of certain decrees against R. On the 28th February 1831, L's claim was allowed, and on the 11th August 1831 M brought this suit against L, S, R, and D and the decree-holders in the suit against R for a declaration of his right to follow the mortgaged property in the hands of S. It was found as a fact that the adoption of D was invalid; that the advance by M to B was justified by legal necessity, and that L was the benamidar of S. It also appeared that M had himself become the purchaser of one of the mortgaged mouzabs. The lower Court gave M a decree declaring him to be entitled to recover the full amount of the mortgage-money from the five mouzabs in the hands of S, L and S appealed, and M filed a cross-appeal, alleging the adoption to be valid and binding on S. It was contended that S, as the representative of R, was estopped from denying the validity of D's adoption, and thus, having been a party to M's first suit, the question as to the liability of the mouzabs to satisfy the mortgage was res judicata as against him. Held, that a purchaser at an execution-sale is not as such

80. Admission—Conclusion proof of adoption—Description of person as adopted son. A, a Hindu, died leaving him surviving a mother B and three sisters. A had a brother P, who had been given in adoption to his maternal uncle R. On A's death, his property devolved on his mother B. B mortgaged the property to the defendant. The mortgage bond was attested by P, who described himself as the adopted son of R. The defendant obtained a decree on the mortgage, and himself became the auction-purchaser at the execution sale. Thereupon A's sisters sued as reversionary heirs, for a declaration that the sale to the defendant was valid only to the extent of B's life-interest in the property sold. The defendant pleaded that P's adoption was invalid, that on A's death the property vested in P, and that the plaintiffs had, therefore, no interest, in the property in dispute. The Court of first instance allowed these pleas, and dismissed the suit. The Appellate Court held that the description in the mortgage-bond, that P was the adopted son of R, amounted to an admission of the adoption by the defendant (mortgagee), and that he was therefore estopped from contesting the adoption. Held, that the defendant was not estopped. The mere fact that P was described in the mortgage-bond as R's adopted son was not any evidence of an admission; and even, if it were, it was not conclusive proof of the adoption (s. 31 of the Evidence Act, 1 of 1872). Held, further, that the fact treated by the lower Appellate Court as an estoppel had no such effect, as it had not caused or permitted the plaintiffs to believe the adoption to be valid and to act upon such belief. *YASHVANT-PUTTU SHENVI v. Held, that, the adoption being invalid on the ground that the widow had not, as a fact, acted under authority from her husband, she was not estopped from denying the adoption by the fact of her having treated it as effective for the period of 18 months. In order that estoppel by conduct may raise an invalid adoption to the level of a valid adoption, there must have been a course of conduct long continued on the part of the adopting family and the situation of the adoptee in his original family must have become so altered that it would be impossible to restore him to it. *Gopalayyan v. ## Transfer by trustee in

The mortgagee took the mortgage in good faith for valuable consideration and without notice of the trust. The mortgagee obtained a decree against the trustee for the sale of the land, the land was sold in execution of that decree. The trustee subsequently brought a suit to recover the land from the purchaser on the ground that the same was trust property, and that he had no power to transfer it. To this suit none of the beneficiaries of the trust were parties. Held, that the plaintiff was estopped by his conduct from recovering possession of the land. GULZAR ALI v. FIDA ALI I. L. The heirs after his death would be as much bound by the father's misrepresentations as if they would have been during his life. LACHMUN CHUNDER GEER GOSSAIN v. KALLI CHURN SINGH 19 W. R. 292 tuted a suit against C for the recovery of the property as the heir and representative of his father on the ground that K was a mere benamidar. The defence taken by C, amongst others, was that K was the real owner he believed her to be. Held, that on the authority of Lachmun Chunder Geer Gossain v. Kalli Churn Singh, 19 W. R. 292, it was a good defence, for, even on the assumption that the purchase was benami, S as heir of B was bound by the misrepresentation of the latter. CHUNNER COOMAR v. HARBANS SAAHAI I. L. 86. — Persons claiming under person who creates the benami. The mere fact of a benami transfer does not in itself constitute such misrepresentation as to bind all persons claiming under the person who creates the benami. O made a benami gift of his property to his wife A. The deed of gift was registered and purported to be made in consideration of the fixed dowry due to A. There was no mutation of names, but O managed the property as A's am-muktār under a general power-of-attorney executed by her in his favour. On acts of O were not such as to constitute an estoppel as against his heirs, and therefore the plaintiff was entitled to the relief he sought. Lachmun Chunder Geer Gossain v. Kalli Churn Singh, 19 W. R. 292, explained SARAT CHUNDER DEY v. GOPAL CHUNDER LAHA I. L. R. 16 Calc. 148

Ultimately, however, a portion of the property was withdrawn, and the remainder only was sold, including part of the property sold in execution of the prior decree. The prior decree-holder did not bid again. Afterwards the prior decree holder brought a suit for a declaration that the share which he had purchased at the sale in execution of his decree was not affected by the auction-sale in execution of the subsequent decree. Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped from claiming such a declaration.

At that time the decree-holder held a prior registered incumbrance against the property. Held, that there was no estoppel; that under s. 114 of the Evidence Act the Court was entitled to presume that the provisions of s. 237 (c) of the Civil Procedure Code had been complied with, and that consequently the notification of sale disclosed the existence of the incumbrance now sued upon; that the plaintiff was referred to. Held, also, that it could not be said that under the circumstances the plaintiff must be taken to have sold in execution of his decree the interest which he held under the bond now in suit; that he could not be compelled to proceed first against those portions of the mortgaged property which had not been sold; and that the bond was enforceable against a purchaser of part of the mortgaged property who had never obtained possession. *BARWANI DAS V. Sale of mortgaged property in execution of a money-decree without express notice of mortgage—Omission to declare mortgage at time of sale—Civil Procedure Code, 1882, s. 237—Right of mortgagee to enforce mortgage against the property in hands of purchaser. A mortgagee under a registered mortgage-deed obtained a money-decree against the mortgagors in some matter other than the mortgage, and sold the mortgaged property in execution of the decree. The mortgage lien was not announced in the proclamation of sale as required by s. 237 of Civil Procedure Code (Act XIV of 1882) and the auction-purchaser had no actual knowledge of the mortgage.

103. ——— Rights of purchasers at sale in execution of a mortgage-deed—Purchase without notice that mortgagor was only benami-holder for the judgment-debtor. The plaintiffs and defendants, either party holding a separate decree against the same estate, had by leave purchased in execution. Both parties claimed the proprietary right and possession, the defendants holding the latter. The first of the decrees in date was the plaintiff's for money against the representatives of the deceased owner of the property, which before then had been mortgaged to the defendants by his widow. The plaintiffs obtained only the equity of redemption, their purchase having been of the right, title, and interest. The mortgagees, having got a decree upon their mortgage against the widow, purchased at the sale in execution and defended the possession which they obtained. Held, that the defendants, in whose favour the decree had been made upon a bond fide mortgage, without notice that the mortgagor had been only holding benami for her husband, had the better title; that the High Court had rightly disallowed an objection taken by the plaintiffs that same principle applied to these plaintiffs, who had purchased his right, title, and interest; and that they were bound equally with him. Romcoomar Coondoo v. Macqueen, L. R. I. A. Sup. Vol 40 11 B. On the 20th of March 1877, J P and G P brought to sale, in execution of money-decrees against S R, two out of those three biswas, which two biswas were purchased by the defendant. On the 16th of April 1877, the plaintiff sued the auction-purchaser for sale of one biswa in satisfaction of his mortgage. Held, that, even if it could be shown (which it could not) that the particular biswa mortgaged to the plaintiff was one of those which had passed into the defendant's possession, the plaintiff was estopped by his previous conduct from suing to bring it to sale under his mortgage. JHINKA v. 142. ————Acquiescence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 115—Question of legal inference—Plea of estoppel appearing for the first time in issue in appeal. Acquiescence is not a question of fact, but of legal inference from facts found. This principle applies also to estoppel. To create an estoppel it is not sufficient to say that it may well be doubted whether the plaintiff would have acted in the way he did but for the way in which the defendants had acted. It must be found that the plaintiff would not have acted as he did. It must be found that the defendants by the "declaration, act or omission intentionally caused or permitted another person to believe a thing to be true and to act upon such belief." A plea of estoppel should not be given effect to in appeal when it was not suggested in the written statement, nor made one of the issues in the first Court, nor one of the issues in the appeal.

representation as to—Contract by infants—Contract Act (IX of 1872), ss. 11, 19, 61, 65—Persons competent to contract—Void contract—Advances on mortgage declared invalid, re-payment of. S. 115 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872) does not apply to a case where the statement relied upon is made to a person who knows the real facts and is not misled by the untrue statement. There can be no estoppel where the truth of the matter is known to both parties. A false representation made to a person who knows it to be false is not such a fraud as to take away the privilege of infancy. Nelson v. Stocker, 4 De G. & J. 458, followed. On the true construction of the Contract Act (IX of 1872), a person who, by reason of infancy, is incompetent to contract, cannot make a contract within the meaning of the Act. A mortgage, therefore, made by a minor is void; and a money-lender who has advanced money to a minor on the security of the mortgage is not entitled to repayment of the money on a decree being made declaring the mortgage invalid; ss. 64 and 65 of the Contract Act being based on there being a contract between competent parties, and being inapplicable to a case where there is not, and could not have been, any contract at all. *Thurston v. The Court tried the case on the merits, and set aside the sale. Held, that the judgment-debtor was bound by the agreement and that he was estopped from contesting the legality of the sale. *Protap Chunder Das v. In the course of the execution of a money decree the judgment-debtor was arrested and brought before the Court. Thereupon the respondents, who were not parties to the proceeding, put in a surety bond covenanting to pay the decretal amount in the event of the judgment-debtor not paying it within a month, and stipulating that, if they failed to pay "the decree-holder would be at liberty to realise the amount by auction sale of their moveable and immoveable properties and by arresting them." The judgment-debtor not having paid the money within a month as stipulated, the decree-holder sought to execute the decree against the sureties, who came in and applied for two months' time to pay in the decretal amount and time was allowed. No payment was, however, made and the decree-holder applied for execution and had one of the sureties' properties sold. The sale was subsequently set aside. On a fresh sale

Section 107 of the Transfer of Property Act does not say that if the parties without any such instrument (i.e., a lease) conduct themselves towards each other as if they were landlord and tenants and moneys pass from one to the other in pursuance of that conduct upon the understanding that it would be repaid in a certain event, there shall be no right to recover that money. In such a case the right to recover arises not upon the lease, because according to law no lease exists, but upon an independent equity arising from the conduct of the parties and founded upon the law of estoppel. *Cornish v. evidence taken on enquiries made under official orders, the effect of which was to place the services taken to support a foregone conclusion the enquiries were secret: no notice was given to anybody on behalf of the boy, nobody was present throughout the enquiries to represent the boy or protect his interests; there was nobody to check the mode in which the alleged statements were elicited, whether by leading questions or otherwise, nobody to test the statements by cross-examination, nobody to watch the accuracy with which they were recorded. Considering the purpose, the nature and the circumstances of the enquiries, which, if they were official in any sense, were certainly not judicial, no weight could be given to the proceedings at, or the results of, those enquiries. On an appeal on the merits of the case being filed the appellate Court without recording any reason as required by s. 568 of the Code allowed such further evidence to be taken, not after the appeal on the merits had been heard and the evidence as it stood had been examined by the judges but on appeal and preliminary application: Held, that the appellate Court had no jurisdiction to admit the additional evidence, that it was wrongly admitted and must be disregarded. *KESROWJI ISSUE v. 14. Admissibility of books of account containing entries after transaction—Corroborative evidence—Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 34. By s. 34 of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, the admissibility of books of account regularly kept in the course of business is not restricted to books in which entries have been made from day to day, or from hour to hour, as transactions have taken place. The time of making the entries may affect the value of them, but should not, if they have been entered by hand at the head office, where they were abstracted and entered in an account book under the date of entry, that being in some cases many days after the transaction of payment or receipt, but the entries were made in their proper order, on the authority of the officer whose duty it was to receive or pay the money. Held, that the entry in the account book was admissible as corroborative evidence of oral testimony to the fact of a payment for what it was worth, objection being only to be made to its weight, not to its relevance under s. 34. Where the fact of payments by a banking firm is distinctly put in issue, the books of the firm being at most corroborative evidence, the mere general statement of the banker to the effect that his books were correctly kept is not sufficient to discharge the burden of proof that lies upon him; particularly if he has the means of producing much better evidence. In a suit for a sum of money on an unadjusted account, plaintiff filed a memorandum (A) with her plaint, from which the amount claimed in the plaint could not be made out. In her examination by the Court the plaintiff put in another memorandum (C) to explain memorandum (A). Defendant admitted that memorandum (C) was signed by him. It had reference to a period immediately preceding that for which the suit was brought. Held, that memorandum (C) was rather evidence to support the originally stated cause of action, than an amendment of the claim or the substitution of one claim or cause of action for another. The case was one which should have been decided not merely on the discrepancy between the two statements made by plaintiff, but on the whole of the evidence. The mere omission of an accountable party, framing his own account, to carry forward into a new account a balance against himself existing in a former one can constitute no evidence in his own favour. To prove the existence of the balance, such omission might be considered in conjunction with other evidence in the case. MULEA MUKHDA v. TEKAETH ROY

Such evidence is not open to criticism merely on the ground that the witnesses are relatives. The relationship of a class of witnesses should be considered only with the ordinary caution with which testimony is sifted where sympathy with one side is to be taken for granted, and should not be treated as making them interested or unreliable witnesses. The fact that one of such persons besides being a relative was assisting the plaintiff in the case, and that the other witnesses were connected with this person by blood or service, is not necessarily sufficient ground for discrediting their evidence. The rejection of certain specific statements of a witness is not necessarily a ground for disbelieving the whole of his evidence; nor is the fact that a Judge has not acted on certain portions of his evidence, which may be due to caution on the part of the Judge or inaccuracy on the part of the witness. *DEBI PERSHAD CHOWDHRY v. The remainder of the land claimed was not included in the map of 1846-47. Held, that a survey map is evidence of possession at a particular time, viz., the time at which the survey was made, and may be evidence of title, but as to whether it is sufficient evidence or not is a question to be decided in each particular case. Held, further, that, as the two maps showed that the portion of the land decreed to the plaintiff was in his predecessor's possession at the date of both surveys—that is to say, at two periods with an interval of nearly twenty years between them—they might be sufficient evidence of title, and the decree of the lower Court was correct. *Moresh Chundra Sen v. 36. ——— Thakbust and survey maps—Act IX of 1847, ss. 3, 5 and 6—Permanent Settlement of 1793—Liability of lands to assessment—Onus of proof—Suit for wrongful assessment. Maps and surveys made in India for revenue purposes are official documents prepared by competent persons and with such publicity and notice to persons interested as to be admissible and valuable evidence of the state of things at the time they are made. They are not conclusive, and may be shown to be wrong; but in the absence of evidence to the contrary they may be judicially received in evidence as correct when made. *Satowari Chosh Mondal v. In every case, the question what lands are included in the Permanent Settlement of 1793 is a question of fact and not of law. The onus of proving that the Government revenue fixed in 1793 is assessed on any particular lands as being included in the Permanent Settlement is on those who affirm that such is the case. Assuming lands not to be within the Permanent Settlement of 1793, the last survey made under s. 3 of Act IX of 1847 is to be taken as the starting point for deciding when the next survey is made, whether lands are within ss. 5 and 6 of that Act. 24. ———— Evidence Act, s. 65, cl. (b), and s. 91—Stamp Act (I of 1879), s. 34, prov. 1.—Suit on an unstamped promissory note. The plaintiff sued to recover from the defendant the balance of a debt due on an unstamped note passed to him by the defendant for consideration of Rs. 38. The note recited that the defendant had received the amount, and would repay it after three months from the date of its execution. The defendant admitted by his written statement, execution of the note and ment of the stamp duty and the penalty, under s. 31 of the Stamp Act I of 1879, which he offered to pay. The Subordinate Judge was of opinion that the note in question was a promissory note, but that the defendant's admission of the consideration enable the plaintiff to sue, although the note itself was inadmissible. On reference to the High Court:—Held per JARDINE, J., that the document sued on was a promissory note, and that the suit being brought on it as the original cause of action, the admission of its contents by the defendant did not avail the plaintiff, the document itself being inadmissible for want of a stamp. Held per BIRNWOOD, J., that the plaintiff could not recover irrespectively of the promissory note, as he did not seek to prove the consideration otherwise than by the note which was inadmissible in evidence. The admission contained in the defendant's written statement did not amount to an admission of the claim as for money lent. The case was one in which no secondary evidence under s. 65, cl. (b), of Act I of 1872 was admissible, the primary evidence, the document itself, being forthcoming. The plaintiff not having offered any independent evidence of the advance alleged by him, and the defendant not

In a suit on a hathchutta bearing a stamp of one anna, the defendant admitted the loan, but pleaded payment. The Judge coming to the conclusion that the document sued upon was promissory note, and should have been stamped with a two-anna stamp, refused to admit it in evidence. He also came to the conclusion that the plaintiff had no cause of action independently of the document, and dismissed the suit. Held, that the plaintiff had a cause of action independently of the document. Held, also, that an implied contract to repay money lent always arises from the fact that the money is lent, even though no express promise, either written or verbal, is made to repay it. They complained that the defendant sought to eject them and they prayed for a declaration that they were entitled to the land in perpetuity, subject only to payment of the yearly rent. In the event of its being held that they were not perpetual tenants, they prayed that the defendant might be ordered to pay them Rs. 7,000, the value of the buildings on the land. The plaintiffs made out a prima facie case without showing or its being shown, that there was any agreement or lease. Before the case had concluded, however, a document was produced which was said to be a counterpart of the agreement of letting made in 1866. It was not registered, and

At the trial the plaintiff produced the fragments, and under s. 11, Madras Regulation XVII of 1802, put in as evidence a registered copy of the bond. He called no witnesses to prove that the fragments produced formed part of the original bond. The Court admitted the registered copy as evidence and found for the plaintiff. The Judicial Committee on appeal reversed this finding on the ground that the registered copy, in the absence of satisfactory evidence of the destruction of the original bond, was improperly admitted as secondary evidence. If a Judge is satisfied of a plaintiff's inability to produce an original pottah on which he relies, he ought to allow secondary evidence to be given of the contents of the document; but he should be satisfied, on reasonable grounds, that the evidence gives a true version of its contents, and he should require sufficient evidence of the execution of the pottah. s. 63. In 1840 K mortgaged a certain house to two brothers, R and C. The mortgage-deed contained a gahan-jahan clause, or clause of conditional sale. It appeared that in 1852 the mortgage house passed into the possession of R and C, and it was alleged that in that year the mortgage had been foreclosed.

1881 T brought this suit to redeem the property.
The foreclosure-decree of 1852 was not forthcoming, and the defendants alleged that it has been burned along with other judicial records at the burning of the Budhvar Palace at Poona in 1873. The only evidence that such a decree had been passed was a reference to a copy of the decree contained in a judgment passed in another suit, and a statement by C (who was dead in 1881) that the mortgage had been foreclosed. The lower Courts held that the reference in the above-mentioned judgment to the copy of the foreclosure decree was sufficient evidence of the original decree under s. 63 of the Evidence Act
(1 of 1872). On appeal.—Held, by the High Court, that there was no legal evidence that the mortgage

I. CONSIDERATION OF, AND MODE OF DEALING WITH, EVIDENCE

1. — Evidence of robbery considered in trial for murder—Trial for robbery and murder—Offences constituting parts of the same transaction—Verdict of jury. Persons con-

on its appearing that the two offences constituted parts of the same transaction:—Held, that recent and unexplained possession of the stolen property which would be presumptive evidence against the prisoners on the charge of robbery was similarly evidence against them on the charge of murder. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. SAMI I. L. R. 13 Mad. 426

2. — Evidence showing commission of another offence by accused other than that for which they are being tried—Evidence, admissibility of. In a criminal trial evidence otherwise admissible is not rendered inadmissible by the fact that it discloses the commission of an offence other than that in respect of which the trial is being held. Reg. v. Dwyer, 2 M. & R. 199, referred to. QUEEN-EMPRESS v. MELUA I. L. R. 14 All. 502

3. — Duty of Judge in trial by jury—Admission of inadmissible evidence. In cases tried by jury it is the duty of the Judge to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties. Evidence relating to proposals of compromise ought not, in the exercise of a proper discretion, to be allowed to go in as evidence of guilty knowledge

4. — Statement by dying person—Murder—Incomplete evidence—New trial—Further evidence—Admissibility of evidence—Dying person, statements of, recorded and attested, if admissible—Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872), s. 32, cl. (1)—Refreshing the memory—First information—Criminal Procedure Code (Act V of 1898), s. 154. Case in which the lower Court passed sentence of death on the accused, but the High Court, on reference, ordered a new trial on the ground that the evidence was incomplete and it was necessary to take further evidence before judgment could properly be pronounced against the accused. Where, upon information received from the chaulidar of the offence (and which information was duly recorded in the station diary), the Sub-Inspector had gone to the hospital to see the wounded man and had there recorded the statement made by him:—Held, that this record of such statement could in no sense be regarded as a first information of the offence, within the meaning of s. 154 of the Code of Criminal Procedure. Held, further, that the writing containing the statement so recorded by the Sub-Inspector and attested by witnesses could not be regarded as evidence. In order to make it evidence, the course indicated in the case of Empress v. Samuruddin, I. L. R. 8 Cal. 211, should have been followed. KING-EMPRESS v. DULAT KUNRA (1902) 6 C. W. N. 921

5. — Theory of prosecution—Evidence, concocted, to fit in with wrong theory of prosecution—Theory of case started before collection of evidence. The theory of a murder upon which prosecution proceeded in this case was arrived at by the Sub-Inspector of Police the day following the night of the occurrence:—Per curiam—It is scarcely necessary to say that a theory should succeed and not precede the collection of evidence, otherwise it is a matter of common knowledge that the evidence may be made to fit in with the theory such as the police-officer in this case propounded. character of the accused. Idem, that this amounted to a misdirection: for, though s. 54 of the Evidence Act declares that "the fact that the accused person has been previously convicted of an offence is relevant" yet the same section also declares that "the fact that he has a bad character is irrelevant," and that the evidence was irrelevant and inadmissible. *ROSHUN DOSAIH v. ## 6. ——— Evidence of general repute—Criminal Procedure Code (1882), s. 117—Rumours—Security for good behaviour

Evidence that there are rumours in a particular place that a man has committed acts of extortion on various occasions, that he has badmaashes in his employ to assist him, and generally that he is a man of bad character, is not evidence of general repute under s. 117 of the Criminal Procedure Code. Evidence of rumour is mere hearsay evidence of a particular fact. Evidence of repute is a different thing. A man's general reputation is the reputation which he bears in the place in which he lives amongst all the townsmen, and if it is proved that a man who lives in a particular place is looked upon by his fellow-townsmen, whether they happen to know him or not, as a man of good repute, that is strong evidence that he is a man of good character. On the other hand, if the state of things is that the body of his fellow-townsmen, who know him, look upon him as a dangerous man and a man of bad habits, that is strong evidence that he is a man of bad character. It cannot be said that, because there are rumours in a particular place among a certain class of people that a man has done particular acts or has characteristics of a certain kind, these

rumours are in themselves evidence under s. 117 of the Code. RAI ISRI PERSHAD v. QUEEN-EMPRESS

The most material evidence for the prosecution was the statement, in the nature of a dying declaration, made to the jamadar of police by one Fakira Shimpi, who received wounds during the dacoity, and who died before the trial commenced. The Assistant Surgeon, who made the post-mortem examination on the deceased, was not called, being on leave; but the Civil Surgeon, on a perusal of the notes left by the Assistant Surgeon, gave evidence that the cause of the death of the deceased was pneumonia aggravated by a stab. In the notes themselves, no mention of death was made.

Now the opinion was formed that the pneumonia was aggravated by the injury, and there was nothing in the notes to support it. Held, that the statement of the deceased ought not to have been admitted in evidence in the absence of evidence to show that his death was caused or accelerated by the wounds received at the dacoity, or that the dacoity was the transaction which resulted in his death. *EMPERATRIX v. position to judge of the culpability of each individual. Witnesses should not be allowed to prove a dying declaration as if it is a substantial piece of evidence in the case. The relevant fact to be proved is the statement made by a deceased person admissible under s. 32 of the Evidence Act; and that statement is not the document made by the Magistrate, but the verbal statement made by the deceased person. The only way of proving a dying declaration is by the evidence of some witness who heard it made, the witness being at liberty to refresh his memory by referring to the note made by him or read over by him at or about the time the statement is made. When such a declaration is not a continuous statement made by the dying person, but is elicited in answer to one or more questions, the document, to be really of use, should clearly set out the exact questions put and the answers made to them. *KING-EMPEROR v. 14. — Contemporaneous oral agreement—Evidence Act, s. 92. Plaintiff sued to recover Rs 21,650-5-1, balance of principal and interest due. He alleged in his plaint that between the 16th February and 23rd July 1867 he paid at the request of defendant's father, the late G. F. Fischer, Rs 25,000 on account of the Shrivengam zamindari; that the defendant, having assumed the management of the zamindari under an assignment from his father, gave plaintiff a receipt for the said sum of Rs 25,000 under date the 7th August 1867; that in October and December 1867 defendant paid the sum of Rs 5,000 and Rs 3,000, respectively, in part liquidation of the debt, but since 20th December 1867 refused any further payment. Defendant answered that this debt due by the late G. F. Fischer had been validly released by the terms of an assignment dated 29th July 1871; that the receipt given by defendant was a mere acknowledgment of the payment of Rs 25,000 by the plaintiff to the late G. F. Fischer, and imposed no obligation on defendant to pay the said amount; that there was no consideration for defendant's promise to pay Rs 25,000; that when defendant executed the receipt he was not aware of the effect of the release; and that the part-payments were made under a mistaken idea of liability. At the hearing it was not disputed that a release was executed, and that this claim was embodied and intended to be embodied in that written release, but it was attempted to set up a contemporaneous oral agreement, leaving this claim as a subsisting demand. The Civil Judge dismissed the suit, holding that this oral evidence could not be adduced to contradict the written release. Held, on regular appeal, that the Civil Judge was right. by way of defence, yet the Court will look to the subsequent conduct of the parties, and if it clearly appears from such conduct that the apparent vendee treated the transaction as one of mortgage, the Court will give effect to it as a mortgage and nothing more. It is a mistake to reject evidence of the conduct of parties to a written contract on the ground that it is only an indication of an unexpressed unwritten contract between them. Conduct is, no doubt, evidence of the agreement out of which it arose; but it may be very much more. In many cases it may amount to an estoppel. In such a case it is clear that evidence of conduct would be strictly admissible under s. 115 of the Evidence Act (I of 1872). And even when conduct falls short of a legal estoppel, there is nothing in the Evidence Act which prevents it from being proved, or, when proved, from being taken into consideration. Courts of Equity in England will always allow a party (whether plaintiff or defendant) to show that an assignment of an estate, which is on the face of it an absolute conveyance, was intended to be nothing more than a security for debt, and they will not only look to the conduct of the parties, but will admit mere parol evidence to show or explain the real intention and purpose of the parties at the time. The exercise of this remedial jurisdiction is justified on two grounds, viz., part performance and fraud. The Courts in India are not precluded by the Evidence Act from exercising a similar jurisdiction. The rule of estoppel, as laid down in s. 115, covers the whole

This document was not registered. On the 29th September 1876, plaintiff executed a deed of sale of the land in defendant's favour, which was unconditional in its terms, and which was duly registered. Plaintiff subsequently brought a redemption suit against defendant on the deed of 29th September, and he contended that, although that deed was, in its terms, an absolute conveyance, he was entitled to adduce evidence of the subsequent conduct of himself and defendant, to show that the transaction was, in fact, not a sale but a mortgage. Held, that the evidence was not admissible. *Balkrishen Das v. accepted and the goods were shipped as follows:

On the 9th December 1890; 6 bales were handed to the same carriers on the 4th December 1890, and were shipped on the 13th December 1890; 10 bales

were handed to the same carriers on the 23rd December and one bale on the 24th December, and these 11 bales were shipped on the 6th January

1891 at intervals of four weeks. He also contended that the shipment on the 6th December 1890 was a late shipment, and that he was not therefore bound to accept the goods under the contract. As to this last contention, the plaintiffs alleged that by the custom of Bombay in the case of contracts

made with members of the Native Piece-goods

Association, the date of the carriers' weight note was to be regarded as the date of shipment, and that, under such a contract as the one in question, delivery to the Railway Company or other inland carrier was equivalent to shipment. This custom, it was alleged, originated in consequence of the above

Association having agreed that all piece-goods ordered out by its members should be conveyed to Bombay by certain lines of steamers only, and by no others. It was stated that, unless some such custom existed, it would in many instances

be impossible for Bombay merchants to carry out their contracts, as no steamers of the selected lines might be available. The Judge of the Court of custom existed, and was generally accepted and

The parties contracted for a shipment on board of a ship or steamer, and to allow evidence of a usage that delivery to a Railway Company at an inland town should be regarded as equivalent to shipment on board a vessel at a seaport town, would be to allow evidence of a usage repugnant to, or inconsistent with, the express terms of the contract. *SMITH v. A genealogical table purporting to have been made by a person since dead, but which was shown to be merely an exhibit binding on him for the purposes of a former suit, was held to be inadmissible in evidence, having been made without the personal knowledge and belief which must be found or presumed in any admissible statement by a deceased person. JAGATPAL SINGH v. It was also objected that the word in the upper portion translated "son" really meant only "child" or "offspring" without distinction of sex. Held, that, even if the appellant's contentions were correct, other expressions in the upper portion of the

Reg. XX of 1817 does not impose on the Daroga any duty of keeping a register of chowkidari chakran lands. From the precise and uniform character of the entries as to such lands appearing in a register kept under the Regulations: Held, that there could be no doubt that they were made under proper direction in the ordinary course of business though outside the statutory duty of the person who made them. That s. 35 of the Evidence Act did not cover such entries but s. 32 (2) of the Act applied and they are admissible in evidence. Ab Nasir v. Manik Chand, 1 L. R. 25 All. 90, referred to. ss. 32 (2), 34—Entries in accounts—Corroboration. The plaintiff relied on entries in the hand-writing of her deceased husband kept in the ordinary course of his business. Held, that entries in accounts relevant only under s. 34 of the Indian Evidence Act (I of 1872) are not alone sufficient to charge any person with liability: corroboration is required; but where accounts are relevant also under s. 32 (2), they are in law sufficient evidence in themselves, and the law does not, as in the case of accounts admissible only under s. 34, require corroboration. Entries in accounts may in the same suit be relevant under both sections, and where that is so it is clear that, inasmuch as they are relevant under s. 32 (2), the necessity of corroboration prescribed by s. 34 does not arise. Though accounts, which are relevant under s. 32 (2), do not as a matter of law require corroboration, the Judge is not bound to believe them without corroboration; that is a matter on which he must exercise his own judicial discretion as a Judge of fact. *RAMPYARABAI v. Taking this into consideration, my husband expressed his wish, when he was on the point of death, that all the houses and shops situate in Pooná, except the house at Benares, should be given to you, and that you should be made owner of all money-dealings connected with Pooná. I therefore, in obeying his command, pass this deed of heirship to you, and make you owner of all the property mentioned above like our son. You therefore enjoy the property in your name joyfully." plaintiffs relied, and at the hearing of the appeal practically no attempt was made to support the finding of the Subordinate Judge. The only contention was that, accepting the pedigree filed by the appellant (defendant), the plaintiffs are heirs of Gur Sahai, as according to it they are samanodakas and therefore in the absence of other nearer heirs excluded the defendant, who is the son of Gur Sahai's sister." Held, that the above paragraph did not under the circumstances and for the reasons stated by their Lordships of the Judicial Committee, preclude the plaintiffs from endeavouring to sustain, on this appeal, the finding of the Subordinate Judge in their favour. Held, also, that the pedigree put in by the plaintiffs were not ancient family records handed down from generation to generation and added to as a member of the family died or was born; but documents drawn up on particular occasions for a specific purpose by members of the family and were accordingly to be treated as mere declarations made by the persons, who respectively drew them up or adopted them.
